Doors To Open Moyers

WASHINGTON AP -- Bill D. Moyers, the new White House press secretary, has started out by pledging that he will be "opening the doors to the news as wide as they can be opened."

Moyers, barely 31 but possessing am impressive government record, took over Thursday as President Johnson's press secretary.

George E. Reedy, after holding the $28,500 - a - year job nearly 16 months, bowed out with a leave of absence to get medical treatment for a painful foot ailment called "hammer toes."

Few White House newsmen expect him to return. Moyers added to that general impression when he was asked if he would object being called White House press secretary, rather than acting press secretary. "I have no objection," he replied.

At his first news briefing late Thursday, Moyers acted like a man who had been doing the job for years. He rattled off details about a series of off the record presidential appointments and confided that after a telephone chat with Mrs. Johnson in Texas the President had lunch at his desk.

When questions were raised, Moyers picked up the phone and got answers if he didn't have them already.

Without question, Moyers has stepped into one of the toughest jobs in Washington -- a job perhaps more difficult than usual because of Johnson's tendency to be his own press secretary and to react like a volcano even to trivial news items he considers critical.

Reedy, though a loyal Johnson supporter for 13 years, never gave the impression to observers of enjoying the full confidence of the President. Most newsmen felt that often Reedy appeared to be almost the last to know what was going on inside the White House.

Moyers, a Texan, apparently does have Johnson's respect and confidence. He is said to be one of the few White House insiders who doesn't hesitate to stand up and be counted when he disagrees with his chief.

Hearnes Signs Sixteen Bills Into Law

JEFFERSON CITY AP--Gov. Warren E. Hearnes Friday signed 16 bills into law, including one under which the state will provide at least 50 per cent of the cost of foster home care of homeless or neglected children in outstate Missouri.

It specifically gives the Division of Welfare the power to accept them for social services and care.

A companion bill, signed earlier, provides for 50 per cent aid in the care of such children in St. Louis and in Jackson and St. Louis counties.

In the outstate areas, where some counties are in financial trouble, the state may provide more than 50 per cent aid.

Other bills signed will:

Strip from the laws on Lincoln University in Jefferson City any reference to "Negro." The school has been integrated ever since the U. S. Supreme Court's 1954 desegregation decision.

Permit state banks and trust companies to purchase and own or lease personal property acquired on the request of and for the use of a customer.

Put the filing deadline at 5 p.m. on the last Tuesday of April of an election year for the filing of political candidates. Now the filing may continue until midnight.

Let the Director of Revenue issue a "maintenance trip ticket," allowing commercial vehicles, if empty, to travel beyond their 25-mile zone for repair or maintenance.

Let savings and loan associations declare quarterly dividends, instead of semi-annually.

Permit hospital or nursing home districts to share in railroad taxes.

Provide that if the superintendent of a state hospital requests the sheriff must apprehend a patient who has escaped.

Allow consolidation of cities, towns or villages that are adjacent except for separation by a street, stream or vacant land.

Provide for a penalty of up to 10 per cent for failure to pay the merchants and manufacturers tax on time.

Search for Kidnap Victim

KANSAS CITY AP -- Despite the tearful appeal of her mother and an intensive search by more than 200 officers and volunteers no trace has been found of 9-year-old Denise Clinton, believed kidnaped in a motel robbery early Thursday.

Maj. James Newman, chief of detectives, said "We're urging all property ownerswithin a 10-mile radius to search their own property.

A spokesman for the Major Case Unit, a select group of officers from police and sheriff's offices in the metropolitan Kansas City area, said the FBI had officially entered the case.

Denise, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Clinton of Independence, was abducted while visiting overnight with her grandparents who manage the motel on U. S. highway 71 in Platte County, about 15 miles from downtown Kansas City.

A bandit took $256 from the motel cash drawer shortly after 2 a.m. Thursday morning and tied and gagged the grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Chelsie Reynolds. He is believed to have driven away from the motel in a white - four-door 1960 Oldsmobile.

The Reynolds freed themselves and moments later discovered Denise was missing.

Jobless Pay Cost Drops

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The cost of unemployment compensation fell to $1,966,670 in June, the lowest since last October.

Dustin Avery, assistant director in charge of unemployment compensation, said today the June total was $102,635 below May this year and $343,278 less than in June last year. Last October the total was $1,904,727.

Initial claims, considered an indication of new unemployment, numbered 22,377 in June, compared with 25,146 a year ago and 17,512 in May.

Crime Spree Ends

TONOPAH, Nev. (AP) —Two Oregon murder-kidnap suspects threw away their pistols and surrendered meekly to highway patrolmen today, ending a crime spree which police say included a bank robbery, the slaying of a deputy sheriff, and kidnaping of nine persons.

The dramatic three-day chase from Oregon, through Northern California and into Nevada, ended at 3:37 a.m. when two California highway patrolmen spotted the fugitives near the Benton agricultural inspection station on the California-Nevada state line.

Ex-convicts Wilbur Marion Grey, 30, a native of Brunswick, Ga., and Carl Cletes Bowles, 24, of Amarillo, Tex., surrendered without resistance.

Their arrests came little more than an hour after they had released the last two of their hostages, Mrs. Marie Champion and her 19-month-old daughter.

Mrs. Champion — wife of California Finance Director Hale Champion —described the two gunment as "pathetic" and "really courteous all the time."

Champion, wounded slightly in the hip by a bullet fired by a Tonopah bystander, had been released earlier.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation took Grey and Bowles into custody and were to return them to Sacramento, Calif., for a hearing before a U.S. commissioner.

Nevada Highway Patrol officers and deputies had trailed the fugitive and hostages — but kept a safe distance for fear the woman and child would be killed.

After surprising two Nevada officers who had stopped to check a car near Tonopah, Bowles and Grey commandeered the officers' car. They talked frequently with officers via the police radio in the car and threatened to harm Mrs. Champion and the infant.

There was actual gunplay only once after Grey and Bowles were found in Nevada. It was in that exchange of fire that Champion was hurt.

At 12:05 a.m., Ralph Marks, a card dealer at the Club Tonopah, heard angry shouting outside the club.

"If you don't bring sandwiches in six minutes," a voice shouted, "we're coming in shooting."

When no one moved inside the club, the man opened fire. Marks fired three shot at the gunmen. One of the slugs nicked Champion in the hip.

Bowles and Grey left the woman and child in the stolen police car and fled on foot. They were walking when captured.

Health Care Action Near

WASHINGTON AP -- The Senate is expected to complete action today on a landmark bill setting up broad new health care for the aged programs and raising all Social Security benefits.

Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield Thursday got a debate limitation agreement considered certain to bring a final vote by tonight.

Under the agreement, debate on all further amendments was limited to one hour each. Two hours were allowed for a motion by Sen. Carl T. Curtis, R-Neb., to return the measure to the Finance Committee.

The Senate has disposed of 25 amendments in two days of voting so far.

Democratic leaders said they were confident of beating off any crippling changes and passing the bill with a heavy majority.

11 Days Left To Register For Election

Scott Countians have 11 days left before the books will close for voter registration for the special statewide election Aug. 17 on three constitutional amendments.

According to the office of Phil Waldman, county clerk, voters may register until July 20. One of the three amendments to be voted on would allow a Missouri governor to succeed himself once.

Registration has closed for a special election in Sikeston July 27 on the proposed $1,200,000 bond issue for water and sewage improvements.

Venereal Disease Make Comeback

Ten years ago doctors felt that venereal disease was a thing of the past.

According to Dr. Thelma Buckthorpe, Scott County health officer, doctors had a drug at that time that could eradicate this disease. But funds, facilities and personnel were put to other uses short of wiping out the disease.

For two years nothing much happened. Then syphilis and gonorrhea began to rise gradually, being most pronounced among the teenagers.

In 1964 several cases of drug-resistant gonorrhea were treated at the Scott County VD Clinic. This means that the drug that could have eliminated all VD in 1955 is no longer effective.

In Scott County there were three times the number of syphilis cases in 1964 then in 1963. Dr. Buckthorpe says that "this may be due to better reporting, which has always "left a lot to be desired."

Women to Be Well Bundled up This Fall

NEW YORK AP -- You'd think that heating houses was going out of style, the way fashion designers plan to bundle up women this fall.

Mannequins with pretty faces and well-turned legs had little chance to show off these assets, so covered were they as they paraded past fashion writers Thursday during the second day of fall previews called the American Designer Series.

Misses who wore boots at the Anne Fogarty show reappeared at the Pauline Trigere performance in spats to match their fuzzy tweed suits.

Under their cutaway jackets they wore jersey blouses with attached hoods that nearly concealed their faces. Even the sheaths in which they appeared later came with foot-high collars called cachecous, meaning neckhiders, although they hid much of the head as well.

After scurrying in and out in a flurry of styles including raincoats as full as umbrellas and tunic-like escort coats over skinny princess dresses, the models returned coddled in opulent furs.

Little white mink suits, broadtail evening gowns, chic ermine boleros worn backwards or forwards, and different kinds of scarves, all five yards long, and sometimes studded with jewels, were in the lineup of hot and high-priced fashions for fall.

On the other hand, Lilly Dache calculated to make herself the heroine of husbands by introducing heat-producing furs at bargain prices. She gave prestige to the pauper pelts--particularly squirrel, muskrat and rabbit.

Communist Speech Ban Stirs State

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A law banning Communist speakers has entangled North Carolina in a web of controversy, spreading from the legislative chambers to the university campuses to the church pulpits.

The law, passed in the fading hours of the 1963 legislative session without debate or a public hearing, prohibits Communists or anyone who pleaded the Fifth Amendment during a loyalty hearing to speak on the campuses of state - supported schools.

University officials have argued the law violates academic freedom and puts politicians in charge of educational matters.

Ministers have urged repeal.

The Southern Association of Schools and Colleges has warned the law could mean loss of accreditation for those state-supported institutions of higher learning.

The legislature refused to consider repeal or amendment this session.

The matter now rests with a nine-member commission, to be appointed by the governor, the Senate president, the House speaker.

The commission is to study the issue, particularly the accreditation of the colleges and universities. A report is expected by November.

Gov. Dan K. Moore has promised to call a special legislative session should the commission suggest changes or repeal of the law.

North Carolina became the only state with such a law when the measure cleared both the Senate and House in less than 30 minutes.

When the legislature returned in 1965 for its session, the demand for repeal or amendment became a roar.

The 120 members o the North Carolina House stood 2-to-1 against repeal. The 50-member Senate was almost evenly divided.

Moore told newsmen, "Ihave received hundreds and hundreds of letters from North Carolina citizens. They favor the law by a 6-1 margin.

Woman Dies In Plunge

KENNETT -- A former Kennett woman, identified as a patient at Winter Veterans Administration Hospital at Topeka, Kan., was killed instantly Wednesday when she fell or jumped about 125 feet or more in the Kansas Statehouse.

She was identified by the hospital and items in a purse as Anna Eileen Short McClain, 43, of Memphis, Tenn., formerly of Kennett.

In Memphis, Mrs. Veda Short said the dead woman was her daughter and that she had been under treatment for a nervous disorder at the Topeka hospital. Mrs. Short said she had been advised that her daughter's condition had improved and that she expected her to return home in two weeks.

Her husband was listed as Cecil McClain of Memphis. She was in military service from March, 1945 to August, 1946. She had retired as a registered nurse.

Mrs. McClain was born in Senath. She is survived by her mother; two sons, Jimmy and Jeffrey McClain, and one daughter, Nancy McClain.

Lentz Funeral Home of Kennett will be in charge of services Friday at 2 p.m. at the chapel. Burial will be at Oak Ridge Cemtery.

Officials said Mrs. McClain fell from a stairway which leads to the dome, a popular tourist spot. The fall was 125 feet.

She struck a rotunda guard rail on the second floor, severing an arm.

On the first floor she hit a maintenance cart being pushed by Clyde Herron, statehouse employe. Herron said that he did not see or hear the woman before she hit his cart.

The statehouse has five floors of offices. From the fifth floor there is a stairway where tourists can walk to the dome, about 304 feet above the first floor, for a view of the city.

A registration book signed by persons going to the dome of the Kansas Statehouse showed "Eileen Short, Kennett, Mo."

Thad Harper, attendant at the stairs, said the woman had signed the book shortly before 9:30 a.m. She appeared normal, he said.

Marines Cut Off Viet Cong

SAIGON, Viet Nam AP -- U.S. Marines made an amphibious landing on an island off their Chu Lai beachhead today and cut off a Viet Cong force that overran a Vietnamese naval headquarters, a U.S. spokesman announced.

A U. S. Navy destroyer rushed to An Hoa island 345 miles northeast of Saigon to cut off the Reds if they tried to escape by sea.

Three U. S. Navy advisers to the Vietnamese junk fleet's division headquarters were on the island when the Communist assault began. Their fate was not known.

The spokesman said the headquarters was overrun at 5 a.m. by a surprise attack but that some of the government force escaped in their junks. He said the Viet Cong force was less than a battalion in size.

Lodge Given Second Tour

WASHINGTON AP -- President Johnson has named Republican Henry Cabot Lodge, an outspoken supporter of Johnson's Vietnamese war policies, for a second tour as ambassador to South Viet Nam.

Administration officials insisted that the swtich from Ambassador Maxwell D. Taylor, who is resigning, to Lodge would mean no change in U.S. policies or major war strategy. Lodge left the Saigon post a year ago.

Lodge and Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara will fly to Saigon Wednesday for a week-long round of conferences with Taylor and American and Vietnamese officials.

This reassessment of the progress of the war could produce some new ideas, but officials here said the main purpose was to make Lodge fully acquainted with all the problems and personalities involved before he takes over.

The White House announced Thursday Taylor's resignation and the President's selection of Lodge and released a "Dear Max" letter from Johnson to Taylor saying: "We shall miss you, but no man has more fully earned the right to meet his personal obligations."

Taylor, 63, succeeded Lodge in June 1964 when Lodge resigned as ambassador to return to the United States and work for the nomination of Gov. William Scranton of Pennsylvania as Republican candidate for president. The nomination went to Barry Goldwater.

Johnson drafted Gen. Taylor from the position he then held as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff to succeed Lodge. In his letter accepting the resignation Jonnson said he was "bound to honor the understanding we had at the time of your initial appointment," that Taylor would serve in Saigon for about a year.

KANSAS CITY (AP)—Robert Bolivar DePugh, leader of the Minutemen, militant right-wing anti - Communist organization, was sought today on a state kidnaping charge.

Lawrence F. Gepford, Jackson County prosecutor, said two young women had signed statements charging the 42-year-old DePugh with holding them prisoners for two weeks and trying to enlist them to seduce Communists and government officials.

Gepford said lie detector examinations given the two women indicated they were telling the truth.

Puller Request Denied

SALUDA, Va. AP -- At 67, retired Marine Lt. Gen. Lewis B. (Chesty) Puller wants to fight again. He is critical of American military efforts in Viet Nam and has requested a combat command.

"I am tired and ashamed to look the taxpayers of the United States in the face," he said in a letter to the commandment of the Marine Corps May 14, which he made public for the first time today. He stressed his experience in guerrilla warfare in Haiti and Nicaragua in the 1920s and 1930s, and his combat record in the Pacific in World War II and Korea.

In Washington, Marine Commandant Gen. Wallace M. Greene said Puller's request for reactivation had been denied.

In a letter to Puller May 27, he wrote that "under conditions as they exist today, there is no requirement for the Marine Corps to ask you to come out of retirement for active service."

Green said Puller's request was given "careful consideration" and the Marine Corps was aware of his "unique qualifications." He added, however: "Our Marines are acquitting themselves both in Viet Nam and the Dominican Republic, in the manner which is expected of them and of which we may all be proud."

Craggy and blunt as ever, and appearing physically and mentally fit, Puller answered these questions at his Tidewater home here in an interview with The Associated Press.

Q. Are you satisfied with American involvement in the Dominican Republic and Viet Nam?

A. No, definitely not.

We made a bad error in the Dominican Republic by failing to seize stores of arms, ammunition and supplies. By now they're scattered throughout Santo Domingo and in the interior. This means we'll be faced with the possibility of guerrilla warfare there for many years to come. Our Marines apparently got no further than the streets and sidewalks of Santo Domingo; they should have seized all military supplies.

In Viet Nam many things are wrong, and there are only three ways to win the war against the Communists there. First, by a full U. S. Navy blockade of the country which would halt most of the arms shipments from Communist countries. Second, forget use of helicopters and clusters and lines of fighting units and revert to attack on the Vietnamese sea coats through use of World War II landing craft. Then, chew up the country by segments by marching regiments back and forth across its narrow boundaries. Third, place a qualified American in command of all forces - including the Vietnamese forces.

Q. Do you approve of the present role of the Marines in Viet Nam?

A. Absolutely note; United States Marines traditionally have been trained as attacking fighting men -- not as policemen or night watchmen.

Q. Do we need a substantial military success before negotiations in Viet Nam?

A. Yes -- defeat of the Viet Cong.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. (AP) — An agreement has been reached by the state chairmen of the Democratic and Republican parties not to have political booths at the Missouri State Fair at Sedalia next month.

U.S. Interest High in Viet Nam Orphans

NEW YORK AP -- As the war in Viet Nam grows, so does the interest of Americans in adopting children orphaned by the fighting, relief agencies report.

Legal red tape all but prevents actually bringing the children into U. S. homes.

But the various agencies, supported by public contributions, are caring for some 25,000 homeless children in Vet Nam, along with tens of thousands of other refugees.

A news photograph -- like other memorable pictures of the child victims of past wars -- did much to intensify Americans' desire to help. This was Associated Press Pulitzer prize-winning photographer Horst Faas' picture of a bandaged girl crying as she limped away from the Dong Xoai outpost where her parents had been killed in battle.

Offers of help poured in from all over America and abroad.

The Foster Parents program enables an individual to adopt a child by proxy- orphaned or not - contributing $15 a month to care for him in his native country. Worldwide in scope, the program now numbers 4,500 Vietnamese among the children it helps.

The first voluntary agency to go into Viet Nam and set up a relief program, at the request of the U. S. government, was the Catholic Relief Services in 1954.

This agency now cares for about 20,000 orphans at four orphanages and a huge refugee camp. It is planning construction of three more orphanages.

No Victory In Viet Nam

HONOLULU, Hawaii (AP) — Is a military victory possible in Viet Nam? Not likely in the opinion of top echelon U.S. military officials in the Pacific, who help run the war in the Southeast Asia country.

In the words of one, "The chance of total military victory for either side is remote, highly remote."

The remark increases the significance of the appointment of Henry Cabot Lodge to his second term as ambassador to South Viet Nam.

Lodge is known by military leaders as a diplomat, a politician. Maxwell D. Taylor, who resigned, is a former four-star general.

The thinking here is that Lodge has been brought back to help solve the political problem involved, if victory can't be won on the battlefield.

Camp H. M. Smith, overlooking Pearl Harbor, is an in-between nerve center of military operations involving South Viet Nam and the Far East. The men in charge o these operations freely admit that the U.S. buildup will continue. There are 60,000 U.S. servicemen in Viet Nam now. The present goal is for 75,000.

He was asked: Has the bombing of North Viet Nam had any noticeable effect on the Viet Cong guerrillas in the south?

"Indications are that the attacks are beginning to hurt," he said. "It has had some impact on infiltration but air power cannot stop it, only slow it down. The bombing has had a definite impact economically and on the morale of the Communists."

52 Perish in Canadian Crash

VANCOUVER, B. C. AP -- A four-engined airliner carrying 52 persons exploded and crashed Thursday night in central British Columbia. There were no survivors.

Officials said the last heard from the Canadian Pacific Airlines DC6B were three radioed cries of "May Day." The distress calls came about 5:10 p.m., soon after the pilot, Capt. John Alfred Steele of North Vancouver, reported he was changing courses slightly to avoid turbulent weather ahead.

Teach Respect for Law And Order, Hall Urges

WASHINGTON AP -- Rep. Durwood G. Hall, D - Mo., Thursday called for a return to the teaching of young people on how to be law abiding citizens.

If this were done, he said, U. S. foreign policy would take care of itself.

He made the comment in referring to the July 4 disturbance at Rockaway Beach in his congressional district, which he said were instigated mainly by young college men and women.

He criticized college professors he said barnstormed as self-appointed experts on foreign aid, and said the subject of so-called "teach-ins" should be changed from U. S. policy in Viet Nam to proper behavior for young men and women.

"Instead of telling Congress and the administration to abandon freedom and liberty in south Asia, let the 'teach-in' go back to fundamentals and teach respect for law and order. . .and ultimately let them teach the meaning of self respect," Hall said.

Most youths involved in the Rockaway Beach rioting were from large urban areas, Hall said.

"Does this kind of behavior indicate that the urban masses are ready to assume the responsibility of total political control which the Supreme Court has thrust upon them?" he asked in referring to the recent reapportionment rulings.

"This sickness. . .must be attributed in some degree to lack of parental supervision in the homes and the lack of exposure to principle, discipline and civic responsibility on the campus."

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

Friday, July 9 Army develops new gun that fits in a soldier's hat. Called "cap" pistol. 1940.

* * *

William H. Veale, president of the National Foundation for Highway Safety, said the following on scores of television and radio interviews in May:

"We are concerned with drinking drivers who do not realize the havoc they cause on our highways. For instance, at 50 miles per hour, your car goes 38 feet before the impulse from the brain tells you to begin-putting-on-the-brakes! If you drink just one can of beer or a whisky cocktail, there is enough alcohol in each so that for 30 minutes, the impulse to put on the brakes is slowed so that your car goes 82 feet at 50 miles an hour! 55% of our accidents involve drinking drivers.

"Fortunately, traffic is moving so we do not have as many accidents as we otherwise would.

If there is a wall or tree, we simply call the undertaker.

"When you announce a car struck a tree at a corner, that driver had been drinking. Alcohol cuts one's vision 25 percent! The driver simply did not see the tree.

"We urge everyone to be as courteous behind the wheel of an automobile as in your own home.

"If you kill someone, he won't know it BUT you will never forget it as long as you live. We say a beer or cocktail behind the wheel of an automobile is not worth that.

"Please, please never drink before or while driving!"

The lid has been carefully placed on the Bobby Baker case by a United States Senate that didn't want to investigate its own but like a well packed garbage can in the summer heat, the stench remains.

A sorry chapter of the Senate has been closed. It was a chapter revealing glimpses of the seamy side of life in the Senate -- of sex with hip-swinging call girls having friends in every branch of the federal government, of lobbyists operating without control and of fantastic profits made on the side by men with inside information at the expense of the nation's taxpayers. But the look at capitol sin was carefully controlled and greatly restricted by the Democratic majority, who didn't desire a scandal on the eve of the 1964 presidential election.

The Senate is notoriously disinclined to investigate its own and Baker was one of them from page boy to secretary to the Democratic majority, and intimate and protege of President Lyndon B. Johnson.

Neither is the Senate inclined to reform itself. So the investigation will produce only the most anemic and ineffective measures designed to prevent future wrongdoing by the Senate's own.

Into this whole sorry proceeding, Sen. B. Everett Jordan, North Carolina Democrat, chairman of the investigating committee, drew a pathetic word picture of his own lack of qualifications to act on the evidence that might have been presented to him.

As the understatement of the year he conceded that he might not have been the ideal man to undertake the investigation.

"Maybe I'm not enough lawyer, a prosecutor type, to do some of the things some people thought out to be done," he confessed with astonishing candor as the hearings closed.

"I don't think that I was equipped to do it -- an investigation to this extent."

He said in response to a question that his staff was adequate to do the job and added that he didn't have any "apologies" for the report.

Senator Jordan from the Senate viewpoint was the ideal man to sweep the Baker case filth under the rug. He was not a chairman who acted in the interest of the American people.

What Senator Jordan's inept performance accomplished in the Baker investigation, replete as it was with pulled punches, carefully covered up facts and witnesses who weren't called, was not good for the long range interest of the Democratic party or the Senate and least of all for the American people -- not "some" of them as Senator Jordan himself admitted but all of them.

THE BUDGET SQUEEZE

Starting its new fiscal year, Washington is doing plenty of pointing with pride. You'd think Uncle Sam was really giving the people a new deal.

We're getting a long-overdue excise tax cut, practically on the heels of equally overdue income tax reductions.

And the Administration boasts that its budget will still be squeezed below $100 billion.

But the fiscal fact is that the federal government this year will spend more than we the people will spend for all our kids' college bills, all the new cars we will buy, all our trips abroad, all the drugs and medicines we'll use and all the food all of us will eat.

How's your budget? -- NATION'S BUSINESS.

4 KEYS TO PESTICIDE SAFETY

Each year most of us use some kind of pesticide or similar chemical. But if you're a farmer, you use far more of them than most people.

It might be a relatively simple operation, such as a farmer or his wife spraying their cattle for fly control, or a more difficult operation where a farmer applies pesticides to his crops for insect control.

Whatever the operation there are four keys to chemical safety that should be followed for safe chemical use, says the National Safety Council. Every farm family should know these keys: labeling, using, storing and disposing.

To begin with, the most important thing to remember is to read the label. Read everything on the label and follow the instructions to the last word. Then:

Use the correct chemical at the right time for the job to be done.

Use the appropriate respirator when required. Wear the prescribed type of clothing or skin covering as noted on the label or on special instructions.

Be sure to wash your hands before eating or smoking when using chemicals.

Keep children away from mixing, dusting or spraying areas.

Seek prompt first aid or medical attention if a toxic chemical gets in or on your body.

Correct storage is the third step. All chemicals should be stored in a cabinet, room or building that can be locked.

To protect children and animals, promptly return to safe storage unused portions that you wish to keep.

Finally, disposal of the pesticide is important. Never throw chemical containers or small leftover amounts in garbage cans or dumps.

Always dispose of empty chemical containers immediately. Crush, break and bury metal or glass chemical containers whenever possible.

El Paso, Texas, has done something a lot of other cities should do. It has put up street signs that reflect auto headlights and can be seen from a block away . . . even at night. El Paso officials claim the new signs make it easier and safer for motorists to find their way after dark.

Most people will support President Johnson's plan to beautify and protect the "scenic corridor" -- the area within the line of sight of the nation's highways.

More and more Americans will be using the new interstate freeways in coming years, driving quickly and conveniently to parts of the country they might not otherwise have visited, seeing new landscapes and works of nature they might not otherwise have had the opportunity to enjoy.

The dumps, the junkyards, the blatant billboards will be banned from the purview of the traveling motorist. None of the ugly artifacts and discards and by-products of an industralized and urbanized civilization will be allowed to mar the esthetic quality of the passing scene.

But out of sight should not be allowed to mean out of mind, for it will not necessarily mean out of existence. The ugliness will not be so visible, but it will, too often, remain.

It is easy today to drive into our large cities on the broad backs of throughways that slice with surgical directness through congested, run-down sections -- and forget that the slums still fester beyond the antiseptic right of way.

It is easy to cruise a modern freeway that arcs with engineered effortlessness across the green countryside -- and forget that the quiet stream in the distance may be fetid with the effluvia of town and factory or that the pleasant grove of trees may screen the raw wounds of land raped for its minerals and then abandoned.

Beautification of the highway vista is important because it is along the roads that so much of our 20th-century ugliness springs up, but it is only one skirmish in the administration's war on ugliness.

Other fronts involve the preservation and protection of untouched green spaces and waterlands and the restoration of those that have become derelict, ending stream and river and air pollution, finding some new use or method of disposal for the mountains of scrapped automobiles whose metal new steel - making processes have rendered surplus.

Americans must care not only for the quality of the land they can see from the highways but also that which they may never see or visit or reside upon.

"Beauty was here and man has destroyed it to a great extent," says Anthony Celebrezze, secretary of health, education and welfare.

"The question is how we can change man's behavior to restore beauty."

HOW YOUR PROFITS AND OURS CREATE JOBS

Look around your factory or office; look at your own home and clothing . . . you'll probably find a third of all the things you see are new products developed in the past 20 years OUT OF PROFITS.

To create new products requires research -- and that takes money. To produce new products requires new and better machinery -- and that takes money. To compete with foreign goods made by cheap labor takes automated machinery operated by skilled workmen -- and both of these take money.

That money comes from profits.

For example, half the people in Warner & Swasey plants are here because we developed the Warner & Swasey Automatics at a cost in research and new equipment of more than $8,000,000 -- almost all of it saved out of profits of past years. In 1964 our profit was the highest in our history, our employment was the highest except during war, our investment in the future was highest. The same is true of most of our customers. THAT is why we are so optimistic about our country and its sound employment.

The tourist business is booming in America, and among those who aren't complaining are the nation's friendly innkeepers.

Motel proprietors, in fact, no longer regard tourists as mere customers but as guests. They say so in their advertising, and you know it must embarrass them to have to mention that the guest rooms aren't free.

But the genial host has nevertheless retained just a smidgeon of practical caution.

On the television set in his motel room, for example, the guest may find a sticker which says:

"This receiver is equipped with an electronic theft alarm so do not unplug or detach without notifying management."

And pasted on the door is this helpful reminder:

"Please check. Did you accidentally include towels or other motel property in your luggage? Your license number is on file at motel office."

Even the most obtuse guest now gets the message and mentally checks his luggage to make sure he has not thoughtlessly -- and accidentally -- included a lamp or a chair that may belong to the motel.

It is gratifying to know that such messages are never directed to the guest who is reading them. But it is sobering to reflect that they wouldn't be there if some clown hadn't done something that prompted them.

Come in as you are folks, Just make sure your hands aren't sticky.

DO YOU KNOW THIS TOWN?

Three men scurried across the intersection against the light during a break in the stream of cars. From the other side, two women shoppers ran for it.

On the curb, two young ladies of about eight years waited. The light turned green, and the two youngsters crossed safely; they were the only ones who had waited.

Two men approached the curb as the light changed, crossed just behind them.

"They set a good example, don't you think?" asked the one.

"They sure do," the other agreed.

"I'm the patrolman on this corner," said the first. "Just went off duty, changed my clothes and I'm heading for home. I get a chance to talk to them at their school around the corner a couple of times a year. That's what I always tell them: set a good example; wait for the light. You may save some grown-up's life."

Camera filters, like lenses should be handled and stored with care to keep them free of dust, fingerprints, and scratches. A dirty or scratched filter will only degrade the image-making quality of any lens with which it is used. A camel's hair brush is a good tool to use for removing dust and other foreign matter from filter surfaces; lens tissue should be used to get rid of finger smudges of other "unbrushable" blemishes. Always brush first to avoid grinding solid particles into the glass; use the lens tissue with a gentle wiping motion, breathing on the surface being cleaned if needed to help loosen stubborn smears.

CABINET STATUS
NO ANSWER

When an old model becomes obsolete, industry puts its inventive powers to work, brings out a new model of superior performance and meets a market demand -- or goes out of business.

Such a rule could well be adopted by government. When a government agency's operation causes widespread dissatisfaction and criticism -- the logical solution should be to identify its weakness, improve its performance and if that is not possible, then discard it.

However, in the President's Message on the Cities to Congress, it was recommended that the Housing and Home Finance Agency be elevated to cabinet status, before determining how to improve its operation. The record of federal participation in housing and urban renewal has been one of red tape and frustration in numberless communities -- the by-passing of state governments -- and the programs rarely if ever lived up to the expectations of the community-at-large.

Until this dissatisfaction and criticism has been impartially evaluated, it would seem inappropriate to promote the failures as well as the successes to the level of cabinet prestige -- giving a sense of permanency to the operation.

Mr. Robert Weaver, HHFA's administrator, indicating that legislative proposals were under consideration observed it was "no time to admit failures," and acknowledged that there was dissatisfaction with aspects of the program and they were still "groping our way."

Rather than cabinet status, the Federal Housing Administration and the Federal Mortgage Association should be transferred to either the Commerce or Treasury Department as more appropriate jurisdiction along with the hospital and college housing loan programs.

This would leave only the Public Housing Administration and the variety of urban programs under HHFA. Their size and scope, together or singly, do not merit cabinet stature.

THE SILENT AMERICANS

A mood of drift and despair is at large in the land. Many of the victims of its gloomy infection were once - proud American patriots.

They have contended long and hard for what they are convinced is right principle. They believe in personal freedom and national independence as the twin cornerstones of the American heritage. Now they are discouraged because their words of wisdom and warning so often go unheeded. Some are silent because they have concluded that all is lost.

Had our first patriots followed this unhappy example, we would have no country to love, no heritage to honor and no history of which to be proud.

Even if the worst were true, even if there were no hope for freedom's survival, this would not relieve men who know the truth and right from their duty to speak out. In fact, so long as free speech is still permitted, hope remains in spite of all doomcriers.

Any trend of history can be reversed if enough men will it. Any man's words may become the spark lighting the fire of determination to save freedom in the souls of others. In the darkest hour, each man needs his brightest torch. It is too late not to try.

Let us hear again from the newly silent Americans. Let them not measure their mark on history by size of audiences and numbers of votes. Truth is more powerful than an army with banners. The silence of men who know truth and right is an invitation to their destroyers to proceed. HLH

KHE SANH, South Viet Nam (AP) — Life is so unlikely among the Vietnamese mountain tribespeople that a child isn't even given a name until its first birthday.

Since many infants die before they are a year old, there doesn't seem much point in naming them until they have at least a 50-50 chance of growing up.

Mountain folk are always interesting to outsiders, who find their ways quaint, repulsive, but full of a primitive charm.

The hillbillies here are no exception. They are members of a Montagnard tribe called the Brous, which rhymes with booze. They live in rugged hills amid rich green jungle drapery a few miles south of the demilitarized zone that theoretically divides this war - torn land.

The Brous are small, slender, dark-skinned people with an intensely black thatch of hair that gives them a wild look.

To anybody but a fellow Brou, the life of the ordinary Brou would seem insufferable. He dwells at a bare survival level. Some work on a French-owned coffee plantation; others till arid hillside patches.

Gastronomically speaking, the Brous' motto seems to be: "If it is smaller than you and can't get away, eat it. You never know where your next meal is coming from."

You see many small dogs around Brou hamlets, but rarely any big older dogs. As soon as they reach an appetizing size, most dogs go into the pot. Among other things the Brous put in the pot are lizards, cats, rats and monkeys.

The chief war weapon of the Brous formerly was the crossbow.

The wooden crossbow is a silent, deadly and effective tool for closeup jungle hunting. The tiny bamboo arrows are tipped with a poison made from tree gum. The poison affects the blood of a game animal but not the meat.

Brou children start courting at 12 or 13 and marry at 15 or 16. The moral standards of married Brous are a cut above civilized conduct. Wife swapping appears unheard of, and the price of adultery may be a poisoned arrow through the heart.

The Brous use any excuse to throw a party, whether it's a wedding, funeral, or just that the moon seems right. The men gather around a crock of homebrew made from rice or potatoes, and proceed to get crocked. The chief takes a gulp through a 6-foot-long straw stuck into the crock, then passes it to the honored guests.

"After you get a quick flash of his bridgework, you have to close your eyes when it's your turn to sip," said one American thus honored.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- Luci Baines Johnson first became interested in the Catholic church through her friend Beth Jenkins, daughter of Walter Jenkins, onetime assistant to President Johnson. Beth has been a student at Marquette University, and it was she who helped Luci arrange her incognito trip to Milwaukee when the President spoke in Chicago last month.

Beth is about four years older than Luci, and the two girls long have been close friends.

At one time President Johnson expected both of his daughters to become Catholics, and so told Pat Brown of California, himself a Catholic convert.

This was because Lynda Bird, the eldest daughter, has been dating a Catholic boy for some time. The President and Mrs. Johnson have not tried to influence their daughters' religious views, but they have discreetly advised against early marriage.

That both Lynda and Luci have been squired by Catholic boys on so many occasions probably results from the fact that most of the military aides at the White House are Catholics. This is not by deliberate design, but rather because White House Society duty is a volunteer matter, in addition to normal military duty. The young officers who serve at the White House must put in a full day with the Army, Navy, or Air Force, then work in the evening at the White House on top of this.

Apparently not as many Protestant or Jewish officers have applied for this extra duty as have Catholic officers. It has been discreetly suggested to the Pentagon that there might be more of a religious mixture, with a few Protestant and Jewish officers sent to the White House for social duty.

Note: The Job of a Military Aide at the White House is to conduct distinguished guests up to the receiving line during official dinners and receptions and to make sure that everything goes right. These occasions frequently involve kings, queens, presidents, visiting Prime Ministers and Foreign Ministers.

NEW FRIENDS

The United States and the Soviet Union may be experiencing strained relations, over North Viet Nam, but one of the most virulent institutional critics of Russia in the past, Georgetown University, is now awash with Russian schoolteachers. They are living in the dormitories and studying American methods of teaching English.

To those who knew Georgetown University in the past, this is just as Revolutionary as the Bolshevik 1917 Revolution. It illustrates the change in the Catholic Church and the innovations wrought by Pope John.

During the 1920-30's the forefront of Anti-Russian opposition in the nation's capital was the famous Jesuit Institution, Georgetown University. Its Foreign Service School was dominated by Reverend Edmund Walsh, who spoke repeatedly and effectively against any relations with Russia. He not only opposed Roosevelt's recognition of the Soviet Union in 1934, but once made a speech at the Air Force War College at Maxwell Field, Ala., advocating preventive war against the Soviet Union.

History has now revealed that the original inspiration for the late Joe McCarthy's anti-Communist binge, which changed the course of U. S. Foreign Policy, came from Georgetown University. Some of the Jesuit Fathers sold McCarthy on the idea that there were "207 card-carrying Communists in the State Department," and he made a Senate speech to that effect; And then was faced with the task of proving his charges --which he failed to do.

After the McCarthy Investigation was over and after the Eisenhower Administration had appointed one of McCarthy's aides, Scott McLeod, in charge of State Department personnel, McLeod came up with the official statement that not one Communist had been discovered in the State Department.

AWASH WITH COMMUNISTS

Father Walsh also had a profound effect upon State Department personnel through his Foreign Service School, one of his close friends being Robert Kelley, in charge of State Department Russian relations.

By training young diplomats at his Foreign Service School, Father Walsh also gave an anti-Russian slant to American foreign policy for many years.

It took Pope John and to some extent the first Catholic President of the United States, with his coexistence speech at American University in June 1963, to change this.

This summer Georgetown has helped twenty - seven Russian schoolteachers spend ten weeks in Washington studying English teaching methods. They are living at the same Institution where Luci, the church's latest convert, will study nursing, and they are getting the benefit of Georgetown teachers and being entertained in friendly fashion by the faculty and neighbors.

In Moscow the leaders of the Kremlin this year boycotted the American Embassy's 4th of July reception. But in Washington the twenty-seven Soviet teachers came out to the Pearson farm in adjacent Maryland to relax on Independence Day, where they spoke pleasantly of their Catholic hosts and of their relations with the American people.

Subsequently Mrs. P. was describing this holiday interlude to Father Joseph F. Thorning of Mount St. Mary Seminary and to a Washington broker.

"I don't think that's much of a story," remarked the broker.

"I rather think it is," remarked Father Thorning.

It having been a rainy day, it was suggested the headline might be: "Georgetown University is Awash with Communists."

McNamara Discloses New Electronic System of Finding Jobs For Defense Dept. Workers Caught in Closings

There have been loud outcries against the phasing out of old Defense Dept. installations. I asked Secretary of Defense McNamara what was being done to help those employes who have been caught up in the closings. Here is his reply in which the Secretary discloses for the first time the unique system devised to help those facing loss of jobs:

By Robert S. McNamara
Secretary of Defense

Washington, D. C.: The Department of Defense today shares a personnel management problem which confronts many industrial firms: how do we keep abreast of rapidly changing technology while meeting the legitimate needs of our work force?

Changes in the extent of location of bases and installations, for example, are absolutely essential if we are to be responsive to developing technology and military planning. Yet it is also essential that the burden of adjusting to these changes should not fall primarily on the individual employes of those installations.

I believe the department, as a responsible employer, can and must assume the major part of that burden as a necessary cost of doing business in a rapidly changing world. And I am certain that it is in the best interests of the government to retain in its employ as many of its skilled and experienced career employes as possible.

In recognition of this challenge, we have initiated a series of far-reaching measures to ease the impact of change on Department of Defense career employes. Among these are: phasing out bases over a period of time, normally from one to four years, which takes advantage of the ordinary attrition rate in the work force; paying the moving expenses of displaced employes to other locations in the Department of Defense; retaining original pay opportunities for a period of two years for employes who accept positions at lower grades; discontinuing appointments (or hiring only temporary personnel) in employment categories where large surpluses of career employes exist or can be anticipated; retraining displaced employes for new jobs and maintaining their compensation during retraining; working with the Civil Service Commission to find jobs for Department of Defense employes in other federal agencies; working with the Department of Labor to counsel, test, and refer interested employes to private industry; maintaining a computer-operated, nation-wide referral system to locate the innumerable job opportunities which arise through normal attrition within the Department of Defense.

The last feature, a nationwide priority job referral system for displaced employes, is relatively new and has some unique features which offer much promise. The use of computers has made it possible for us to centralize and speed up the complicated task of matching the skills of displaced employes to vacancies which, through normal personnel turnover, occur regularly throughout the Department of Defense's huge work force approximating one million civilian employes. This is now being accomplished through a single Centralized Referral Activity (CRA), which was established on an operational basis March 1, 1965.

Briefly, the Centralized Referral Activity works in this way: the displaced employes are described in terms of their individual skills or fields of specialization, and of the salary and locations they are willing to accept. This information is stored at the CRA in Dayton, Ohio, on magnetic tape. Every few days, the CRA sends out "stopper lists" displaying the job categories for which qualified employes are already available.

Installations receiving these lists are not permitted to fill any existing vacancies in the listed categories by hiring new employes, or, in some circumstances, even by promotion. Rather, they must send a requisition to the CRA, which then prints out a priority placement certificate containing the names of the employes registered as qualified for the job. The installation with the vacancy then arranges directly for employment of any individual listed with the organization which no longer needs him.

This system is invoked only when the difficulty of placing employes requires department-wide efforts. Otherwise, normal placement and reassignment procedures of individual commands, the military departments or the various defense agencies are used.

In the first three months of the CRA's operation, over 1600 registrants were placed, about one-half from priority placement certificates, the balance from supplementary programs. Obviously, employes must be placed where jobs exist and frequent moving is necessary. About 54 per cent of the registrants in the Department of Defense nationwide referral system who have been placed to date moved from their present areas to another location in the department.

Although employe moving expenses are currently paid by the government, concern that employes might incur expenses above the present limitations led the President to propose legislation which would allow substantial increases in such compensation. For those employes who cannot be given new jobs in their present locations, who do not elect to move, and who are not eligible for retirement, the President has proposed severance payments that will assist them substantially in making the transition to other employment. These proposals for increased transportation expenses and severance pay are now receiving active consideration in the Congress and are strongly supported by the Department of Defense.

Neither the Centralized Referral Activity, nor any of the other measures undertaken within the Department of Defense, constitutes a panacea for the problem of technological change and employe dislocation. These measures do illustrate, however, that there is much that management can do, and I firmly believe must do, to cope with the effect of management decisions on the careers of those employes who are affected.

In this era, we do not have a surplus of skilled labor. Far from it. The problem is to match the skills to the jobs -- and this is a problem which no modern society can afford to leave unsolved.

Carol Jane Bartholomew Says Vows With Ronald Galemore

Soft candlelight illumed the beautiful nuptial setting for one of the loveliest weddings of the early summer season, Sunday, the twenty-seventh of June, in the First Baptist Church in Sikeston, when Miss Carol Jane Bartholomew, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Henry Bartholomew, Sr., Sikeston, became the bride of Ronald Gene Galemore, elder son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe B. Galemore, Charleston.

The double-ring ceremony was performed by Dr. E. D. Owen of Cape Girardeau, former pastor of the bride, in the presence of many friends and relatives.

The bridal couple pledged their vows beneath a large brass arch with arrangements of stock placed on a pedestal on either side. Appointing each side of the arch were two large seventeen-branch candelabra which were adorned with large white satin bows and held glowing white cathedral tapers. Immediately behind the arch was a small nine-branch candlelabra holding glowing white cathedral tapers. Twelve single candelabra were placed across the front of the altar. Immediately before the arch was the white peau do soie kneeling bench where the bridal couple knelt for the benediction.

Four single brass candelabra holding glowing white cathedral tapers and adorned with white satin bows lined the bridal aisle which was covered with the traditional white bridal carpet. The bridal aisle was marked off by white satin bows and streamers and closed off except to the bridal party.

Nuptial music was provided by Miss Shirley J. Altom at the organ. Miss Altom was attired in a sky-blue summer satin brocade floor-length gown. A white carnation corsage accented in blue completed her attire. She accompanied Michael Lee, soloist, who sang "I Love Thee," and "The Lord's Prayer."

GIVEN BY FATHER

Upon the chimes of the traditional wedding march, the radiant bride approached the altar on the arm of her father who escorted her down the bridal aisle and gave her in marriage. For her wedding the bride chose an exquisite pure white peau de soie creation fashioned with scoop neckline and long tapered sleeves that came to a point over the hands and were closed with tiny self-covered buttons at the wrists. The bodice was overlaid with reembroidered alencon lace motifs. The motifs were repeated around the scoop neckline and again in the long dome-shaped skirt. The back fell into a coachman with self-trimmed bow at the waistline of the long-sweep train which had lace motifs in the swallowed-tailed train.

She wore a headpiece fashioned in a dainty princess crown of seed pearls and attached to this was a waist length veil of pure silk illusion with lace motifs around the bottom edge. The bride carried a large cascade arrangement of two dozen white butterfly roses with white satin streamers tied in lovers' knots. Attached to her bridal bouquet was a pure linen and lace handkerchief which had been carried by her matron of honor, Mrs. Larry L. Gardner, in her wedding. The bride's only jewelry was a white gold necklace with a diamond pendant, a gift of the groom. White peau de soie slippers completed her bridal attire. The bride carried out "the something old, something new, something borrowed, and something blue" theme in her bridal attire.

Miss Bartholomew chose Mrs. Larry L. Gardner of New Madrid as her matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Sandra Ferguson of Crayne, Kentucky, a former college roommate of the bride, Miss Linda Johnson, and Mrs. Ronald Cullins, cousin of the groom. They were attired identically in dresses fashioned with romance-blue chantilly lace bodices with deep renascence necklines and long tapered sleeves. The floor-length, pencil-slim skirts were of organza over satin. Bias bands of self fabric encircled the empire waistlines and self-tailored bows enhanced the back waistlines. They wore matching headpieces of romance blue. Their circular nosetip veils were secured to princess crowns of seed pearls. They each carried large cascade arrangements of blue-tipped carnations with blue satin streamers tied in lovers' knots. Romance blue tinted slippers completed their attire.

Little Miss Sheila Ann Estes of Portageville, cousin of the bride, served as flower girl. She carried a white basket trimmed with blue satin bows and filled with blue-tipped carnation pedals. Miss Carolyn Galemore, Bertrand, and Miss Claudia Mulcahy, Sikeston, both cousins of the groom, served as candlelighters. Miss Jamie Galemore, Bertrand, cousin of the groom was in charge of the rice bags. She carried a large white basket trimmed with large white bows and tulle, and filled with individual rice bags of blue-tinted rice and blue ribbon. The girls were attired identically in ice blue chantilly lace bodices with jewell necklines and elbow-length sleeves. The floor-length A-line skirts were organza over satin. Bias bands of self fabric encircled the empire waistlines and self-tailored bows enhanced the back waistlines. They wore blue tinted carnation wristlet corsages and small single strands of pearls and white wrist-length gloves with pearl buttons at the wrists, gifts of the bride. They wore ice blue tinted slippers to match their gowns.

The ring bearer, Master Larry William Hart, cousin of the bride, carried the bridal couple's rings down the aisle on a rectangular-shape pillow of white satin edged in chantilly lace. Each corner was decorated with a satin bow and streamers tied in lovers' knots and accented with teardrop pearls.

Attending Mr. Galemore as best man was Haskell Ross of Decatur, Alabama, former college roommate. Groomsmen were Lawrence Galemore and Jerry Galemore of Charleston, cousins of the groom, and Mike Ellis of Charleston, friend of the groom.

Serving as ushers were James Henry Bartholomew, II, of Sikeston, brother of the bride; Gary Galemore of Charleston, brother of the groom; Richard "Dickie" Galemore and Kenneth Quertermous of Charleston, cousins of the groom.

All men of the wedding party were attired in black formal tuxedoes. All the men of the wedding party wore white elegants carnation boutonnieres except the groom. Mr. Galemore wore a white butterfly rose boutonniere.

Mrs. Bartholomew wore for her only daughter's wedding an original creation of powder blue lace. Her dress was fashioned in a sabrina neckline and elbow-length sleeves and accented with a self fabric tailored bow belt. She wore a matching flowered pill box hat of various shades of blue and a corsage of white carnations with powder blue tulle and lace ribbon. Powder blue tinted slippers and bag of peau de soie and white gloves completed her ensemble.

RECEPTION

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the church dining room with the bride and groom, their parents, and the bridesmaids forming the receiving line.

The beautifully appointed bride's table was covered with a white linen cloth overlaid with blue net which was caught at intervals with net, ribbon, and white wedding bells. A large silver punch bowl and tray appointed each end of the table and two seven-branch candlelabra holding glowing tapers flanked the large five column wedding cake topped with white wedding bells which centered the table. Greenery encircled the cake with white gold runners imprinted with "Carol Jane and Ronald, June 27, 1965" down the center of the table. A small open white Bible of pastry enscribed in blue icing "Carol Jane Bartholomew and Ronald Gene Galemore in Holy Matrimony June 27, 1965" was placed immediately in front of the wedding cake. Nuts and decorated mints were served from silver compotes.

The reception was catered by Mrs. Rebecca Sharp of New Madrid. Serving at the reception were Miss La Donna Gartrell of Dexter, college friend of the bride, Mrs. Lou Ella Barringer of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, Mrs. Ronald E. Knight of Charleston, and Miss Peggy Anne Lee of Sikeston, all friends of the bride. Presiding at the guest book was Mrs. Howard Reed of Jefferson City. The wedding book enscribed "Carol Jane and Ronald" was placed on a table covered with white linen cloth and decorated in the same theme as the bride's table. At the opening of the book where the guests registered was a formal wedding portrait of the bride. All those assisting at the reception wore white carnation corsages accented in blue.

Upon leaving the reception the bride and groom threw the traditional bridal bouquet and garter. The bride's bouquet was caught by Miss Linda Johnson and the garter was caught by James Henry Bartholomew, II.

Leible Sparkles For Kiwanis Lewis Explodes in Sixth

At Puckett Field last night, Kiwanis bumped off Legion in the first game of the National League doublehitter. Legion was overrun with a score of 6-2.

Lieble was the ace pitcher of the first bout as he held his opponents to 6 hits and 2 runs. Allen, backed up by Puckett, was given the loss allowing 6 runs on 10 hits.

Kiwanis took the lead right at first as they drilled a hit to score a run in the bottom of the second holding Legion scoreless. Kiwanis went on to trip 4 hits in the third to force across 3 runs. In the top of the fourth, Legion acquired their first of 2 runs of the evening. The slugging Kiwanis took 2 runs on 2 hits to add to and total their score to 6. Legion made another effort as they cracked another hit to score again in the last.

Shy and Britt showed off again as each pounded 2 hits -- each having a double for the lossers. Leible not only sparkled in tossing the ball, but also in belting it. The little pitcher smashed 2 singles and one homerun for the powerful Kiwanis team. Milton also had 3 hits 3 -- one being a double.

Not All Taxes Are Being Cut

NEW YORK -- If you suspect that despite all the talk about tax cuts your tax bills have been adding up to as much or even more than ever, you may well be right.

Much of this is due to rising state and local taxes. The total tax is estimated at around $50 billion this year. In 1963 these levies averaged out to about $250 per capita. This year the figure is close to $290 per capita.

But the federal government, too, has been taking in more than before it cut the rates. Its receipts from all sources are up $4 billion over a year ago.

The Treasury explains that with two million more persons employed now than before the tax cut early in 1964, and with many others getting higher pay and working longer hours, the total personal income has been rising. So there is more subject to tax, even if the rates have been lowered.

Also corporate profits have been soaring. The corporate income tax rate was lowered in two steps -- from 52 per cent to 48 per cent. But tax collections on the larger earnings netted the Treasury nearly $2 billion more in the fiscal year that ended June 30.

The Treasury also suspects that much of the increase in collections in the past year has been due to their new computers. These machines keep a closer eye on an individual's sources of income, such as interest and dividends. And more of these are being reported now than when tax forms were inspected only by the human eye, and on a sampling basis.

Some taxes you pay the federal government aren't included in the cut on income rates. Social Security levies, for instance, have risen as more persons were employed. And next year the percentage withheld from pay checks will be steeper than ever.

But the biggest percentage rise in tax collections has been at the state and local level.

The Tax Foundation, a New York-based research agency, reports that from fiscal 1955 to 1965 federal tax receipts rose 72 per cent. In the same 10 years state tax receipts jumped 136 per cent, and local governments increased their take by 117 per cent.

Some of this was due to increased prosperity supplying higher incomes and swelling property values on which to levy taxes. Much of it was due to use of new taxes or higher rates on old ones.

If the U. S. Treasury could take in about $4 billion more from all sources in the 1965 fiscal year, the state and local collectors probably did at least as well.

One way or another, many Americans will be paying more taxes this year, even if the federal income rate has been cut.

You can save a lot of breath if you will remember what an old backwoods justice of the peace told an oratorically minded young lawyer. "Fuss," said the judge, "is the poorest substitute they is fer sense."

Act To Close Two Taverns

ROCKAWAY BEACH, Mo. (AP)—Legal steps were taken late Wednesday night to close two of Rockaway Beach's four taverns as a result of last weekend's riot by more than 2,000 college - age July 4th vacationers.

Peter Rea, the Taney County prosecutor, filed for temporary injunctions against Rocco's Gay 90s and the Ol' Still Barefoot, and Magistrate Clifford Crouch issued them. The sheriff's office was ordered to take immediate action.

A hearing in Taney County Circuit Court before Judge Garner Moody was set for 1 p.m. July 12.

The prosecutor had conferred with Rockaway Beach business people who signed a petition urging that he take action against the taverns. They said they feared further rioting over the Labor Day weekend.

Want to Meet Friends in West?

Southern Californians have an organization that is known over the nation as a "home-away-from-home." It is located at Sycamore Grove, Section 9, Los Angeles.

On July 11 they will have an all-day picnic where all travelers can assemble and swap yarns with former homefolks. Every year new faces appear, and before they leave have met others from their home state and home towns.

This past winter E. P. and Jennie Aldridge attended one of these gatherings. It is a day when all visitors pool their midwestern cooking specialties for a meal and spend the day in friendly surroundings.

To attend one of these get-togethers when traveling to the Golden State, drop a card to Melvin Sullivan, Box 633, Norwalk, Calif. 90652.

My keys were tiny blocks of wood
Discarded by the mill,
The keys to my piano --

The Modern Christian

If Christians possess "new life," why do they differ so little from others who do not claim to be Christians?

The Apostle Paul leaves no doubt that the Christian enters a new existence (I Cor. 1:30, Col. 2:10). The stress in these passages is not on a moral demand, but on the sheer fact of existing in faithful attachment to God.

To His (God's) gift you owe your existence in Christ Jesus" (I Co. 1:30). In Christ, Christians have entered into the possession of the fullness of existence.

We are accustomed to such phrases as "in the army" or "in the high income bracket." Yet, we have difficulty in appreciating the impact of being "in Christ."

Paul's thought reveals a deeper insight than the mere adding on of a new layer of dignity or responsibility. The depth of its meaning is given when Paul says: "If anyone is in Christ, he is a new creature" (2 Cor. 5:17).

The new life is so new and its effects so profound, that it can be compared only to the act of creation: In Christ Jesus Christians have been created" (Eph. 4:24).

The Christian's existence, now in the final stages of God's design, does not entitle him to passivity, but necessarily fires him to action because "the time is short" (I Cor. 7:29).

Some Christians, like the Thessalonians, conclude that there is nothing more to do but to await the second coming of Christ. Paul agrees with this, but equates the srvice of God with awaiting the return of His Son (I Thess. 1:9).

We can observe stagnancy within others and most assuredly within ourselves. There is here a double dimension: what we are, and how we live what we are. The one is a gift of God, and the other is a response to the gift.

The difference that you observe between the Christian or new creature, and the non-Christian lies not in the gift to the new man, but in the response of the new man.

A computer clicking away like mad in the Pentagon has popped up the fact that Col. Steve Canyon is one of the few military men who have had contact with former Queen Bay of Mahnay.

And that explains why Steve is ordered on exchange duty with the Royal Air Force in Hong Kong.

Steve isn't at all displeased at the assignment, although he has most unpleasant recollections of the Queen Bay, who cooly amputated her own infected had after she had shot her husband, the king, and was deposed by her crafty stepdaughter.

One reason Steve finds his new post most pleasurable is a lass named Mew Hasty, an Intelligence Flying Officer in the Women's Royal Air Force.

But what will happen when Steve runs afoul of the ex-Queen, now feared in Hong Kong as MADAME HOOK? You'll find out in the exciting and romantic new adventure in--

New Pastor At Hayti

HAYTI — R. Harold Clement will move to Hayti, Monday to begin work as minister of the Church of Christ.

Clement is from Ridgely, Tenn., where he has worked with the church of Christ there for three years.

Clement is 32, married and has three daughters. His wife's name is Bernadean; his eldest daughter, Anetta is 7; Sharon is 3; and Denise is 18 months.

Clement started preaching in the Chicago area in 1956. He helped start the Lakeview Church of Christ in Chicago area in 1958. He attended for two years the Harding Graduate School of Bible and religion in Memphis. Mr. and Mrs. Clement are both graduates of Cottage Grove High School of Cottage Grove, Tenn. They were reared in Henry County, Tennessee, near Paris. The congregation is truly looking forward to their moving to Hayti. The Minister's home is being redecorated.

DON CAROL MORROW of Little Rock, Ark., brother of Melvin Morrow, will be commissioned a second lieutenant in graduation exercises at Arkansas Military Academy at Camp Robinson in Arkansas tomorrow.

A brand-new, red-hot flight officer en route overseas was taking off from Ascension in an A-20. The technique of this particular "Smoldering Boulder" was to guess when he'd reached required flying speed and retract his landing gear--which should make the airplane fly.

Possibly the undulations of the runway caused a slight miscalculation; on this takeoff, the airplane settled slightly as the pilot brought the gear up and the prop tips struck the runway. Much to the surprise of the navigator, the course was held and the climb-out was continued. The navigator, of course, figured that the pilot would make a quick swing around the flight pattern and land the ship. To check the intentions of the pilot, the navigator called him on the interphone. "Mr. Blotz, do you know we hit the runway with our props on take-off?" he inquired.

"Roger," replied Mr. Blotz. "Don't you think we should return, land and inspect the damage?" asked the navigator. "To hell with them!" said Mr. Blotz. "Let 'em fix their own runway."

--Lt. Col. G. T. Iovine

We were on board ship en route to Germany. When the fire bell sounded, there was a mad scramble. It was every man for himself. Order wasn't restored until a voice boomed: "Don't push, don't push! There's plenty of water for everybody!" — Arthur D. Frederick, Jr.

PRAYER
For Today From The Upper Room

For freedom did Christ set us Free: stand fast therefore, and be not entangled again in a yoke of bondage. (Galatians 5:1, ASV)

PRAYER: O Lord God, I thank Thee that Jesus came and shared my nature, suffering, and dying for me. Praise be to Thee that I learn through Him that my freedom is not found in pampering my own will but in obeying Thine. Grant that I may receive Christ and in Him know freedom which is freedom indeed. For these things I ask and thank Thee in the name of Jesus, who taught His disciples to pray, "Our Father who art in heaven. . . . . .Amen."

Beet Tests Continue In Dunklin

KENNETT -- Dunklin County agriculturists are continuing to experiment with sugar beet crops in hopes of soon getting Government acreage allocations.

Marvin C. Dobbs, Dunklin county agent, said two five-acre plots are testing for best planting and harvesting times and seeking to develop a variety suitable to this area of the country. The Delta Research Center at Portageville is testing soil fertility.

Sugar beet testing plots were set up in Southeast Missouri, Northwest Tennessee and Northeast Arkansas in 1961 under supervision of the Great Western Sugar Co. of Denver.

Arkansas and Missouri test plots showed sugar beets can be grown in the area and that sugar content of the beets was adequate.

"But it is still in an experimental stage," Mr. Dobbs said.

The research center in Portageville is conduction the testing this year.

"We think sugar beets would be profitable in this area if we can get Government acreage and if any sugar beet companies decide to expand. It might be years," Dobbs said.

Arkansas agriculturists discontinued testing at the Northeast Branch Experiment Station in Keiser after the harvest last fall.

Maxie Taylor, director of the station, said testing was conducted in clay soil at Keiser and in sandy soil at Manila.

"But we found we would have trouble getting a market," Taylor said. "There are enough sugar beets being grown now to meet demand."

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: I am 21 years old. My father-in-law is 40. Three weeks ago my father-in-law had a small benign tumor removed. Before the operation a nurse came into his room and shaved his chest.

Last night we went to see him and he said he has never felt better in his life. My father-in-law remarked that he is certain a part of his feeling of well-being is because he is now rid of all that strength-sapping hair on his chest. He says he is going to continue to shave his chest every week or so and urged me to do the same.

My wife was present during this conversation but she remained silent. On the way home she said, "I always thought my father was a little nutty but now I'm sure. If you dare shave your chest I'll brain you."

Do you know anything about this practice? I'd like an opinion from an outsider. — HARRIED HUSBAND

Dear Husband: One of the fascinating aspects of writing this column is that the search for answers get me involved in the goll-darnedest things. My medical consultants tell me the only males they have encountered who shave their chests are female impersonators.

Dear Ann Landers: In a recent column you told a parent that his sassy teenager really WANTED to be hauled up short and disciplined. You said kids often push as far as they can — testing, hoping somebody will say, "Enough. No more of this." Well, I'm a teen-ager who will back you up. You never wrote truer words.

I am a boy almost 19 and I understand things a lot better than I used to. I know from experience there were times when I talked terrible to my folks and did things I shouldn't have done because I wanted them to move in on me. Instead, they let me do anything. When I got into trouble they made excuses for me and got me off.

A high school teacher saved me from becoming a delinquent and a bum. She told me I had too good a brain and too much ability to waste it on nonsense and that I'd better discipline myself because it was apparent that nobody at home was going to do it. That teacher changed my life. She did the job my folks failed to do. I will never forget her. — GRATEFUL GEORGE

Dear George: Everything begins with an idea. Your letter may give other teen-agers an idea that could change their lives. Thanks for writing.

Dear Ann Landers: Three years ago our son got a young girl in trouble. Her parents kicked her out of the house and we took her in. Our son did not marry her because he saw no chance of a good life with the girl. Our religion permits only one marriage and he didn't want to waste it.

After the baby was born the girl asked us if we would adopt the child and raise it. She wanted to get as far away from our town as possible. We agreed.

In September my husband is being transferred to a large city 3,000 miles from here. I feel it would be best to let our new friends believe the child is ours and to say nothing about the background. My husband says we should tell the whole truth because sooner or later someone who knows us is sure to pop up and make us look like fools and liars.

What is your opinion? — STRICTLY OUR OWN BUSINESS

Dear Strictly: Of course this is your business, but unfortunately, it's the kind of business some people like best. Tell your new friends the youngster is your grandchild whom you adopted as the result of "an unhappy situation." No more need be said.

If excessive drinking is wrecking your health or destroying someone you love, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Help for the Alcoholic," enclosing with your request 20 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

... about to take on all the responsibilities of womanhood.

In the past few years, the number of marriages between the ages of 15 and 19 has increased overwhelmingly. Too often juvenile marriage statistics are immediately followed, however, by an increase in divorces, too.

You may find yourselves in the position of having a son or daughter who marries very young. The best thing you can do is to try to make the marriage a success. Teach your youngsters, through strong religious Faith, that marriage is a permanent union based on two people united and working together. Faith is a powerful guide for your children and comforter through growing up or growing older. This week go with your children to the Church or Synagogue of your choice.

Today In U. S. History

Today is Friday, July 9, the 190th day of 1965. There are 175 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1755, Gen. Edward Braddock's British regulars marched, as in dress parade, against the French-held Ft. Duquesne. The British ran into a hail of musketry fire from an enemy they could not even see in the thick forest. The Redcoats retreated, leaving the area of what is now Pittsburgh to the French. Braddock was killed; his only surviving aide was young George Washington.

On this date:

In 1778, the ratification of the Articles of Confederation began at Philadelphia.

In 1850, the nation's 12th president, Zachary Taylor, died after 16 months in office.

In 1916, the first merchant submarine to cross the Atlantic and the first in time of war, the German "Deutschland," arrived in Chesapeake Bay from Germany.

In 1927, one of the greats of the American theater, John Drew, died after being stricken on stage in San Francisco.

In 1944, Japanese resistance ended on Saipan in the Marianas Islands after a battle of nearly a month.

Ten years ago -- nine scientists--seven of them Nobel Prize winners -- published an appeal to end the use of thermonuclear bombs and to abolish war.

Five years ago-- President Dwight D. Eisenhower, following a threat by Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev to retaliate with rockets if the United States intervened in Cuba, warned he never would permit the establishment of a Communist-dominated government in the Western Hemisphere.

SLANDER

Slander casts a shadow
Like that of bat wings
O'er the lives of those it hovers o'er
Destroying those who come
Within its hideous sway
Destroying in a short swift flight
That which its objects
May have spent all their lives
To build right.

Grant Hearing For Montgomery

A hearing requested by attorneys for Joel A. Montgomery, wealthy banker and landowner, was granted today by Gov. Warren E. Hearnes after the chief executive received formal extradition papers from the governor of Tennessee.

A three-member panel, to be appointed by Governor Hearnes, will hear attorneys for Montgomery and then make recommendations to the governor.

The papers were received in Jefferson City today, Governor Hearnes told the Standard, and although only two members of the panel have been appointed, no date has been set for the hearng. The governor said he has appointed Robert Howard, Columbia, dean emeritus of the University of Missouri Law School, and Orville Richardson, St. Loui, former president of the Missouri Bar Association, to the panel. The third member of the panel will be selected from the Kansas City area, Hearnes indicated.

Tennessee Gov. Frank Clement requested that Montgomery be extradited to face involuntary manslaughter charges stemming from a traffic accident in Memphis nearly six years ago.

The governor said he acted at the request of Tennessee's Shelby County Atty. Gen. Phil M. Canale.

Montgomery was a passenger in his own car, driven by Mrs. Betty Lou Sells, when Miss Glenda Wiles was killed in a collision of the Wiles vehicle and Montgomery's car in Memphis, Oct. 14, 1957.

Mrs. Sells was indicted on second - degree murder charges, convicted and given a three - year sentence. The Tennessee Supreme Court reversed the case and it has not been re-tried.

The dead woman's family, according to Memphis attorney James Smith, does not wish to press the matter any further.

An indictment against Montgomery for involuntary manslaughter was returned by a grand jury Jan. 26, 1962.

Former Tennessee Gov. Buford Ellington requested extradition of Montgomery in 1962, but Missouri Gov. John Dalton declined and the matter was dropped.

A complaint for state warrant was filed in the Jury term of Scott county circuit court by Prosecuting Attorney Fielding Potashnick, at the request of Tennessee Shelby County Attorney General Canale. The warrant's purpose is to establish as legal fact that Montgomery is in Scott county, according to Potashnick.

GOV. WARREN E. HEARNES will visit Kennett this weekend to play in the annual Kennett Four-Ball Golf Tournament at the Country Club. He is expected to arrive Saturday morning and go from there to the Kennett Square where he will meet local and area residents on the south side of the Courthouse between 11 a.m. and 12:15 p.m. The Governor will qualify Saturday and play in the golf tourney Sunday afternoon before returning to Jefferson City. He will attend church services Sunday morning at the Baptist Church in Kennett.

Surviving are one son, David Barton, Catron; one daughter, Mrs. Johnnye Jolly, Catron; one sister, Mrs. Agnes Martin, Calhoun City, Miss.; three brothers, Jesse Mize, Walnut Ridge, Ark., Johnnie Mize, Cleveland, Miss., and J. B. Mize, Hollister, Okla.; two grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Paving Plan Given Approval

NEW MADRID — In a session of the board of aldermen Tuesday, little but routine business was attended to, according to Mrs. Pauline K. Allen, city clerk.

The council approved $722.00 in a cooperative plan with Harry Leuer for paving and gutter of about 65 feet on the northeast corner of Powell and Virginia streets where Mr. Leuer is constructing an office building, with Ralph Boyer to do the work.

Mayor Robert Riley appointed City Engineer Jack Long to make and survey a proposed plan for improvements to the city's streets, curbs and sidewalks in preparation for requesting federal assistance in making the approved improvements.

Minutes of the June meeting were approved, reports of all officials were read and approved and all current bills of the city were ordered paid.

Rotary Club Will Install

NEW MADRID — The Rotary Club will install new officers at a special installation and Rotary Ann night dinner at Rosie's Colonial tavern at 6:15 p.m., Monday, according to Harold Sloas, president.

Dr. Frank Sisson of Sikeston, past district governor of Rotary, will serve as installing officer.

New officers who will take over their duties are Carl Sanders as president, James F. Helms as vice-president, Harry Leuer as secretary, and Shelton Rhodes as treasurer.

What really worries me is the case of poor-little-rich-girl Gamble Benedict and her Andre. I mean, how do an heiress and a chauffeur split their community property? She's got this 20-million-dollar trust fund--and he's got his driver's license.

Pot Hole To Rescue

CLIFFWOOD BEACH, N.J. (AP) — For months, residents in this Monmouth County community have complained about bumps and pot holes in their roads.

A hole in the road played the role of hero Thursday.

Fifteen - month - old James Dresser was playing with a spatula in the kitchen of the family home. He stuffed the utensil's handle in his mouth and a metal hook at the end of it caught in the roof of his mouth.

His mother, Mrs. Edward Dresser, was unable to remove the hook. She called police who dispatched an ambulance.

Minutes later, as the youngster was being rushed to a hospital the ambulance hit a pot hole. The jolt shook the hook out of Jimmie's mouth.

The tot was treated for a cut and returned home.

Jerry Lewis Not on Dean's Guest List

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Dean Martin will do 31 television shows this season with 142 guests — but not Jerry Lewis. Not even for a million dollars.

Martin says that both TV and movie produces have bid the big mony for the reunion of the famed comedy team, which split up with bitter words in 1956.

"I like Jerry," says Dean. "I even kiss him when we run into each other, but I don't like the things he said about me."

The feeling is mutual on Jerry's part.

When the two split, the team was one of the funniest and most successful in show business history. It was a $4 million a year corporation.

Now, nine years later, ech does considerably better than that on his own.

People often wonder why the two broke up.

Dean sums it up: "Jerry's work is his life. My life is golf."

To Dean, work is a hobby. He tapes his TV series in two hours after playing 18 holes of golf.

"These guys who take a week to do a half-hour TV show gotta be crazy," says Dean. Dean's first show took four hours but he fixed that.

"I cut out the dress rehearsal."

Dean's got other things to do.

"I make three movies a year, do 15 weeks at the Sands Hotel in Las Vegas, cut a dozen or so albums and make 25 single records a year. And they say Dean Martin doesn't work."

That's because Dean does most of his preparation on the golf course. He plays with a script.

"I hit a four wood, take the paper out of my pocket, look at it and then memorize my lines while I'm walking to the next hole."

Dean, always looking for shortcuts, believes people in the Los Angeles area waste too much time driving in heavy traffic.

"The other night Jeannie and I wanted to go to the Hollywood Bowl.

"I put her on the back of my motorcycle and we made it there in 15 minutes, just weaving in and out of traffic.

"The traffic was heavy, too. Jeannie said 'I know it's heavy because so many cars are rubbing my knuckles."

"We parked the cycle back of the hot dog stand and got home in 15 minutes. It's crazy to spend two hours driving a car."

Dino recently made his first hole in one. He had promised his foursome that he would buy them dinner.

"They want dinner — in Japan. It seems they're crazy about the rice over there."

Easy and Tight Money Fans Collide

NEW YORK — One of the by-products of the recent hullabaloo in the stock market is still with us: signs of an increasing conflict between the easy and tight money advocates.

Should the United States keep prosperity rolling by making credit abundant at low interest rates? Or should it heed past examples of overconfidence and nip a possible speculative boom to stave off a bust?

One of the reasons apparently behind the selling wave on Wall Street was fear that the Federal Reserve Board would further tighten up on credit and interest rates. And all the talk brought out the difference in opinion between Johnson administration leaders who want easy money and the Federal Reserve Board which traditionally is more cautious.

The Federal Reserve Board has tightened the money supply a little of late. But credit is still easy — as witness the steep rise in personal and business debts.

The debate is the perrenial one: Are people getting in over their depths? Would a marked slackening in the business pace and in job opportunities, and hence in personal incomes, topple many family budgets and bring on general distress?

The administration and the board seem agreed on one thing —at the moment the economy is strong and the credit burden thus doesn't seem dangerous.

The conflict, as Wall Street sees it, is over the chancey future: Will the economy continue to expand? And at what pace?

Steady and moderate gains would seem to offer only minor problems and many wished for benefits. But a big expansion, if based on still easier credit and still greater accumulation of personal and business debts, might lead to an overheating of the economy with an inevitable downturn ahead. And then, say the conservatives, look out for trouble among those who have piled their debts too high.

Defenders of the spread of the habit of fashioning family budgets to the ratio of monthly payments to expectable income point to the fact that personal saving have risen along with personal debts.

But the conservatives warn against generalizations. They say that many who have increased their savings may have little or no debt. And many who have taken on more installment debts may have little if any savings.

It's the latter who would be hurt if something happened to jobs and incomes.

The easy money school argues that the best way to assure more people of having jobs and good incomes is to make credit easy enough for business to borrow to expand its activitie — and for consumers to borrow to buy the goods that increased industrial activity will offer.

And that is one of the things that stock traders were wondering about: Will business go on expanding? Will employment continue to increase? Will a conflict between easy credit and tight money advocates develop and add still another uncertainty to the economic outlook?

Many are betting on the administraton to win and credit to stay fairly plentiful and cheap. But some look for the Federal Reserve Board to get more worried about the size of consumer and business debts and what might happen if the economic expansion plans didn't pan out as expected.

An overage bon vivant was advised by his doctor to slacken those extra- curricular activities and give up women.

"But, doc," he protested, "if I give up women, I might as well give up my life."

"I'm sorry," said the doctor, "but you're literally tearing yourself up piece by piece."

To sin by silence when they should protest makes cowards out of men.

Doors To Open Moyers

WASHINGTON AP -- Bill D. Moyers, the new White House press secretary, has started out by pledging that he will be "opening the doors to the news as wide as they can be opened."

Moyers, barely 31 but possessing am impressive government record, took over Thursday as President Johnson's press secretary.

George E. Reedy, after holding the $28,500 - a - year job nearly 16 months, bowed out with a leave of absence to get medical treatment for a painful foot ailment called "hammer toes."

Few White House newsmen expect him to return. Moyers added to that general impression when he was asked if he would object being called White House press secretary, rather than acting press secretary. "I have no objection," he replied.

At his first news briefing late Thursday, Moyers acted like a man who had been doing the job for years. He rattled off details about a series of off the record presidential appointments and confided that after a telephone chat with Mrs. Johnson in Texas the President had lunch at his desk.

When questions were raised, Moyers picked up the phone and got answers if he didn't have them already.

Without question, Moyers has stepped into one of the toughest jobs in Washington -- a job perhaps more difficult than usual because of Johnson's tendency to be his own press secretary and to react like a volcano even to trivial news items he considers critical.

Reedy, though a loyal Johnson supporter for 13 years, never gave the impression to observers of enjoying the full confidence of the President. Most newsmen felt that often Reedy appeared to be almost the last to know what was going on inside the White House.

Moyers, a Texan, apparently does have Johnson's respect and confidence. He is said to be one of the few White House insiders who doesn't hesitate to stand up and be counted when he disagrees with his chief.

Hearnes Signs Sixteen Bills Into Law

JEFFERSON CITY AP--Gov. Warren E. Hearnes Friday signed 16 bills into law, including one under which the state will provide at least 50 per cent of the cost of foster home care of homeless or neglected children in outstate Missouri.

It specifically gives the Division of Welfare the power to accept them for social services and care.

A companion bill, signed earlier, provides for 50 per cent aid in the care of such children in St. Louis and in Jackson and St. Louis counties.

In the outstate areas, where some counties are in financial trouble, the state may provide more than 50 per cent aid.

Other bills signed will:

Strip from the laws on Lincoln University in Jefferson City any reference to "Negro." The school has been integrated ever since the U. S. Supreme Court's 1954 desegregation decision.

Permit state banks and trust companies to purchase and own or lease personal property acquired on the request of and for the use of a customer.

Put the filing deadline at 5 p.m. on the last Tuesday of April of an election year for the filing of political candidates. Now the filing may continue until midnight.

Let the Director of Revenue issue a "maintenance trip ticket," allowing commercial vehicles, if empty, to travel beyond their 25-mile zone for repair or maintenance.

Let savings and loan associations declare quarterly dividends, instead of semi-annually.

Permit hospital or nursing home districts to share in railroad taxes.

Provide that if the superintendent of a state hospital requests the sheriff must apprehend a patient who has escaped.

Allow consolidation of cities, towns or villages that are adjacent except for separation by a street, stream or vacant land.

Provide for a penalty of up to 10 per cent for failure to pay the merchants and manufacturers tax on time.

Search for Kidnap Victim

KANSAS CITY AP -- Despite the tearful appeal of her mother and an intensive search by more than 200 officers and volunteers no trace has been found of 9-year-old Denise Clinton, believed kidnaped in a motel robbery early Thursday.

Maj. James Newman, chief of detectives, said "We're urging all property owners within a 10-mile radius to search their own property.

A spokesman for the Major Case Unit, a select group of officers from police and sheriff's offices in the metropolitan Kansas City area, said the FBI had officially entered the case.

Denise, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Clinton of Independence, was abducted while visiting overnight with her grandparents who manage the motel on U. S. highway 71 in Platte County, about 15 miles from downtown Kansas City.

A bandit took $256 from the motel cash drawer shortly after 2 a.m. Thursday morning and tied and gagged the grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Chelsie Reynolds. He is believed to have driven away from the motel in a white - four-door 1960 Oldsmobile.

The Reynolds freed themselves and moments later discovered Denise was missing.

Crime Spree Ends

TONOPAH, Nev. (AP) —Two Oregon murder-kidnap suspects threw away their pistols and surrendered meekly to highway patrolmen today, ending a crime spree which police say included a bank robbery, the slaying of a deputy sheriff, and kidnaping of nine persons.

The dramatic three-day chase from Oregon, through Northern California and into Nevada, ended at 3:37 a.m. when two California highway patrolmen spotted the fugitives near the Benton agricultural inspection station on the California-Nevada state line.

Ex-convicts Wilbur Marion Grey, 30, a native of Brunswick, Ga., and Carl Cletes Bowles, 24, of Amarillo, Tex., surrendered without resistance.

Their arrests came little more than an hour after they had released the last two of their hostages, Mrs. Marie Champion and her 19-month-old daughter.

Mrs. Champion — wife of California Finance Director Hale Champion —described the two gunment as "pathetic" and "really courteous all the time."

Champion, wounded slightly in the hip by a bullet fired by a Tonopah bystander, had been released earlier.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation took Grey and Bowles into custody and were to return them to Sacramento, Calif., for a hearing before a U.S. commissioner.

Nevada Highway Patrol officers and deputies had trailed the fugitive and hostages — but kept a safe distance for fear the woman and child would be killed.

After surprising two Nevada officers who had stopped to check a car near Tonopah, Bowles and Grey commandeered the officers' car. They talked frequently with officers via the police radio in the car and threatened to harm Mrs. Champion and the infant.

There was actual gunplay only once after Grey and Bowles were found in Nevada. It was in that exchange of fire that Champion was hurt.

At 12:05 a.m., Ralph Marks, a card dealer at the Club Tonopah, heard angry shouting outside the club.

"If you don't bring sandwiches in six minutes," a voice shouted, "we're coming in shooting."

When no one moved inside the club, the man opened fire. Marks fired three shot at the gunmen. One of the slugs nicked Champion in the hip.

Bowles and Grey left the woman and child in the stolen police car and fled on foot. They were walking when captured.

Health Care Action Near

WASHINGTON AP -- The Senate is expected to complete action today on a landmark bill setting up broad new health care for the aged programs and raising all Social Security benefits.

Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield Thursday got a debate limitation agreement considered certain to bring a final vote by tonight.

Under the agreement, debate on all further amendments was limited to one hour each. Two hours were allowed for a motion by Sen. Carl T. Curtis, R-Neb., to return the measure to the Finance Committee.

The Senate has disposed of 25 amendments in two days of voting so far.

Democratic leaders said they were confident of beating off any crippling changes and passing the bill with a heavy majority.

11 Days Left To Register For Election

Scott Countians have 11 days left before the books will close for voter registration for the special statewide election Aug. 17 on three constitutional amendments.

According to the office of Phil Waldman, county clerk, voters may register until July 20. One of the three amendments to be voted on would allow a Missouri governor to succeed himself once.

Registration has closed for a special election in Sikeston July 27 on the proposed $1,200,000 bond issue for water and sewage improvements.

Venereal Disease Make Comeback

Ten years ago doctors felt that venereal disease was a thing of the past.

According to Dr. Thelma Buckthorpe, Scott County health officer, doctors had a drug at that time that could eradicate this disease. But funds, facilities and personnel were put to other uses short of wiping out the disease.

For two years nothing much happened. Then syphilis and gonorrhea began to rise gradually, being most pronounced among the teenagers.

In 1964 several cases of drug-resistant gonorrhea were treated at the Scott County VD Clinic. This means that the drug that could have eliminated all VD in 1955 is no longer effective.

In Scott County there were three times the number of syphilis cases in 1964 then in 1963. Dr. Buckthorpe says that "this may be due to better reporting, which has always "left a lot to be desired."

Women to Be Well Bundled up This Fall

NEW YORK AP -- You'd think that heating houses was going out of style, the way fashion designers plan to bundle up women this fall.

Mannequins with pretty faces and well-turned legs had little chance to show off these assets, so covered were they as they paraded past fashion writers Thursday during the second day of fall previews called the American Designer Series.

Misses who wore boots at the Anne Fogarty show reappeared at the Pauline Trigere performance in spats to match their fuzzy tweed suits.

Under their cutaway jackets they wore jersey blouses with attached hoods that nearly concealed their faces. Even the sheaths in which they appeared later came with foot-high collars called cachecous, meaning neckhiders, although they hid much of the head as well.

After scurrying in and out in a flurry of styles including raincoats as full as umbrellas and tunic-like escort coats over skinny princess dresses, the models returned coddled in opulent furs.

Little white mink suits, broadtail evening gowns, chic ermine boleros worn backwards or forwards, and different kinds of scarves, all five yards long, and sometimes studded with jewels, were in the lineup of hot and high-priced fashions for fall.

On the other hand, Lilly Dache calculated to make herself the heroine of husbands by introducing heat-producing furs at bargain prices. She gave prestige to the pauper pelts--particularly squirrel, muskrat and rabbit.

Communist Speech Ban Stirs State

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A law banning Communist speakers has entangled North Carolina in a web of controversy, spreading from the legislative chambers to the university campuses to the church pulpits.

The law, passed in the fading hours of the 1963 legislative session without debate or a public hearing, prohibits Communists or anyone who pleaded the Fifth Amendment during a loyalty hearing to speak on the campuses of state - supported schools.

University officials have argued the law violates academic freedom and puts politicians in charge of educational matters.

Ministers have urged repeal.

The Southern Association of Schools and Colleges has warned the law could mean loss of accreditation for those state-supported institutions of higher learning.

The legislature refused to consider repeal or amendment this session.

The matter now rests with a nine-member commission, to be appointed by the governor, the Senate president, the House speaker.

The commission is to study the issue, particularly the accreditation of the colleges and universities. A report is expected by November.

Gov. Dan K. Moore has promised to call a special legislative session should the commission suggest changes or repeal of the law.

North Carolina became the only state with such a law when the measure cleared both the Senate and House in less than 30 minutes.

When the legislature returned in 1965 for its session, the demand for repeal or amendment became a roar.

The 120 members o the North Carolina House stood 2-to-1 against repeal. The 50-member Senate was almost evenly divided.

Moore told newsmen, "Ihave received hundreds and hundreds of letters from North Carolina citizens. They favor the law by a 6-1 margin.

Woman Dies In Plunge

KENNETT -- A former Kennett woman, identified as a patient at Winter Veterans Administration Hospital at Topeka, Kan., was killed instantly Wednesday when she fell or jumped about 125 feet or more in the Kansas Statehouse.

She was identified by the hospital and items in a purse as Anna Eileen Short McClain, 43, of Memphis, Tenn., formerly of Kennett.

In Memphis, Mrs. Veda Short said the dead woman was her daughter and that she had been under treatment for a nervous disorder at the Topeka hospital. Mrs. Short said she had been advised that her daughter's condition had improved and that she expected her to return home in two weeks.

Her husband was listed as Cecil McClain of Memphis. She was in military service from March, 1945 to August, 1946. She had retired as a registered nurse.

Mrs. McClain was born in Senath. She is survived by her mother; two sons, Jimmy and Jeffrey McClain, and one daughter, Nancy McClain.

Lentz Funeral Home of Kennett will be in charge of services Friday at 2 p.m. at the chapel. Burial will be at Oak Ridge Cemtery.

Officials said Mrs. McClain fell from a stairway which leads to the dome, a popular tourist spot. The fall was 125 feet. She struck a rotunda guard rail on the second floor, severing an arm.

On the first floor she hit a maintenance cart being pushed by Clyde Herron, statehouse employe. Herron said that he did not see or hear the woman before she hit his cart.

The statehouse has five floors of offices. From the fifth floor there is a stairway where tourists can walk to the dome, about 304 feet above the first floor, for a view of the city.

A registration book signed by persons going to the dome of the Kansas Statehouse showed "Eileen Short, Kennett, Mo."

Thad Harper, attendant at the stairs, said the woman had signed the book shortly before 9:30 a.m. She appeared normal, he said.

Marines Cut Off Viet Cong

SAIGON, Viet Nam AP -- U.S. Marines made an amphibious landing on an island off their Chu Lai beachhead today and cut off a Viet Cong force that overran a Vietnamese naval headquarters, a U.S. spokesman announced.

A U. S. Navy destroyer rushed to An Hoa island 345 miles northeast of Saigon to cut off the Reds if they tried to escape by sea.

Three U. S. Navy advisers to the Vietnamese junk fleet's division headquarters were on the island when the Communist assault began. Their fate was not known.

The spokesman said the headquarters was overrun at 5 a.m. by a surprise attack but that some of the government force escaped in their junks. He said the Viet Cong force was less than a battalion in size.

Lodge Given Second Tour

WASHINGTON AP -- President Johnson has named Republican Henry Cabot Lodge, an outspoken supporter of Johnson's Vietnamese war policies, for a second tour as ambassador to South Viet Nam.

Administration officials insisted that the swtich from Ambassador Maxwell D. Taylor, who is resigning, to Lodge would mean no change in U.S. policies or major war strategy. Lodge left the Saigon post a year ago.

Lodge and Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara will fly to Saigon Wednesday for a week-long round of conferences with Taylor and American and Vietnamese officials.

This reassessment of the progress of the war could produce some new ideas, but officials here said the main purpose was to make Lodge fully acquainted with all the problems and personalities involved before he takes over.

The White House announced Thursday Taylor's resignation and the President's selection of Lodge and released a "Dear Max" letter from Johnson to Taylor saying: "We shall miss you, but no man has more fully earned the right to meet his personal obligations."

Taylor, 63, succeeded Lodge in June 1964 when Lodge resigned as ambassador to return to the United States and work for the nomination of Gov. William Scranton of Pennsylvania as Republican candidate for president. The nomination went to Barry Goldwater.

Johnson drafted Gen. Taylor from the position he then held as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff to succeed Lodge. In his letter accepting the resignation Jonnson said he was "bound to honor the understanding we had at the time of your initial appointment," that Taylor would serve in Saigon for about a year.

Puller Request Denied

SALUDA, Va. AP -- At 67, retired Marine Lt. Gen. Lewis B. (Chesty) Puller wants to fight again. He is critical of American military efforts in Viet Nam and has requested a combat command.

"I am tired and ashamed to look the taxpayers of the United States in the face," he said in a letter to the commandment of the Marine Corps May 14, which he made public for the first time today. He stressed his experience in guerrilla warfare in Haiti and Nicaragua in the 1920s and 1930s, and his combat record in the Pacific in World War II and Korea.

In Washington, Marine Commandant Gen. Wallace M. Greene said Puller's request for reactivation had been denied.

In a letter to Puller May 27, he wrote that "under conditions as they exist today, there is no requirement for the Marine Corps to ask you to come out of retirement for active service."

Green said Puller's request was given "careful consideration" and the Marine Corps was aware of his "unique qualifications." He added, however: "Our Marines are acquitting themselves both in Viet Nam and the Dominican Republic, in the manner which is expected of them and of which we may all be proud."

Craggy and blunt as ever, and appearing physically and mentally fit, Puller answered these questions at his Tidewater home here in an interview with The Associated Press.

Q. Are you satisfied with American involvement in the Dominican Republic and Viet Nam?

A. No, definitely not.

We made a bad error in the Dominican Republic by failing to seize stores of arms, ammunition and supplies. By now they're scattered throughout Santo Domingo and in the interior. This means we'll be faced with the possibility of guerrilla warfare there for many years to come. Our Marines apparently got no further than the streets and sidewalks of Santo Domingo; they should have seized all military supplies.

In Viet Nam many things are wrong, and there are only three ways to win the war against the Communists there. First, by a full U. S. Navy blockade of the country which would halt most of the arms shipments from Communist countries. Second, forget use of helicopters and clusters and lines of fighting units and revert to attack on the Vietnamese sea coats through use of World War II landing craft. Then, chew up the country by segments by marching regiments back and forth across its narrow boundaries. Third, place a qualified American in command of all forces - including the Vietnamese forces.

Q. Do you approve of the present role of the Marines in Viet Nam?

A. Absolutely note: United States Marines traditionally have been trained as attacking fighting men -- not as policemen or night watchmen.

Q. Do we need a substantial military success before negotiations in Viet Nam?

A. Yes -- defeat of the Viet Cong.

U.S. Interest High in Viet Nam Orphans

NEW YORK AP -- As the war in Viet Nam grows, so does the interest of Americans in adopting children orphaned by the fighting, relief agencies report.

Legal red tape all but prevents actually bringing the children into U. S. homes.

But the various agencies, supported by public contributions, are caring for some 25,000 homeless children in Vet Nam, along with tens of thousands of other refugees.

A news photograph -- like other memorable pictures of the child victims of past wars -- did much to intensify Americans' desire to help. This was Associated Press Pulitzer prize-winning photographer Horst Faas' picture of a bandaged girl crying as she limped away from the Dong Xoai outpost where her parents had been killed in battle.

Offers of help poured in from all over America and abroad.

The Foster Parents program enables an individual to adopt a child by proxy- orphaned or not - contributing $15 a month to care for him in his native country. Worldwide in scope, the program now numbers 4,500 Vietnamese among the children it helps.

The first voluntary agency to go into Viet Nam and set up a relief program, at the request of the U. S. government, was the Catholic Relief Services in 1954.

This agency now cares for about 20,000 orphans at four orphanages and a huge refugee camp. It is planning construction of three more orphanages.

No Victory In Viet Nam

HONOLULU, Hawaii (AP) — Is a military victory possible in Viet Nam? Not likely in the opinion of top echelon U.S. military officials in the Pacific, who help run the war in the Southeast Asia country.

In the words of one, "The chance of total military victory for either side is remote, highly remote."

The remark increases the significance of the appointment of Henry Cabot Lodge to his second term as ambassador to South Viet Nam.

Lodge is known by military leaders as a diplomat, a politician. Maxwell D. Taylor, who resigned, is a former four-star general.

The thinking here is that Lodge has been brought back to help solve the political problem involved, if victory can't be won on the battlefield.

Camp H. M. Smith, overlooking Pearl Harbor, is an in-between nerve center of military operations involving South Viet Nam and the Far East. The men in charge o these operations freely admit that the U.S. buildup will continue. There are 60,000 U.S. servicemen in Viet Nam now. The present goal is for 75,000.

He was asked: Has the bombing of North Viet Nam had any noticeable effect on the Viet Cong guerrillas in the south?

"Indications are that the attacks are beginning to hurt," he said. "It has had some impact on infiltration but air power cannot stop it, only slow it down. The bombing has had a definite impact economically and on the morale of the Communists."

52 Perish in Canadian Crash

VANCOUVER, B. C. AP -- A four-engined airliner carrying 52 persons exploded and crashed Thursday night in central British Columbia. There were no survivors.

Teach Respect for Law And Order, Hall Urges

WASHINGTON AP -- Rep. Durwood G. Hall, D - Mo., Thursday called for a return to the teaching of young people on how to be law abiding citizens.

If this were done, he said, U. S. foreign policy would take care of itself.

He made the comment in referring to the July 4 disturbance at Rockaway Beach in his congressional district, which he said were instigated mainly by young college men and women.

He criticized college professors he said barnstormed as self-appointed experts on foreign aid, and said the subject of so-called "teach-ins" should be changed from U. S. policy in Viet Nam to proper behavior for young men and women.

"Instead of telling Congress and the administration to abandon freedom and liberty in south Asia, let the 'teach-in' go back to fundamentals and teach respect for law and order. . .and ultimately let them teach the meaning of self respect," Hall said.

Most youths involved in the Rockaway Beach rioting were from large urban areas, Hall said.

"Does this kind of behavior indicate that the urban masses are ready to assume the responsibility of total political control which the Supreme Court has thrust upon them?" he asked in referring to the recent reapportionment rulings.

"This sickness. . .must be attributed in some degree to lack of parental supervision in the homes and the lack of exposure to principle, discipline and civic responsibility on the campus."

Doors To Open Moyers

WASHINGTON AP -- Bill D. Moyers, the new White House press secretary, has started out by pledging that he will be "opening the doors to the news as wide as they can be opened."

Moyers, barely 31 but possessing am impressive government record, took over Thursday as President Johnson's press secretary.

George E. Reedy, after holding the $28,500 - a - year job nearly 16 months, bowed out with a leave of absence to get medical treatment for a painful foot ailment called "hammer toes."

Few White House newsmen expect him to return. Moyers added to that general impression when he was asked if he would object being called White House press secretary, rather than acting press secretary. "I have no objection," he replied.

At his first news briefing late Thursday, Moyers acted like a man who had been doing the job for years. He rattled off details about a series of off the record presidential appointments and confided that after a telephone chat with Mrs. Johnson in Texas the President had lunch at his desk.

When questions were raised, Moyers picked up the phone and got answers if he didn't have them already.

Without question, Moyers has stepped into one of the toughest jobs in Washington -- a job perhaps more difficult than usual because of Johnson's tendency to be his own press secretary and to react like a volcano even to trivial news items he considers critical.

Reedy, though a loyal Johnson supporter for 13 years, never gave the impression to observers of enjoying the full confidence of the President. Most newsmen felt that often Reedy appeared to be almost the last to know what was going on inside the White House.

Moyers, a Texan, apparently does have Johnson's respect and confidence. He is said to be one of the few White House insiders who doesn't hesitate to stand up and be counted when he disagrees with his chief.

JEFFERSON CITY AP--Gov. Warren E. Hearnes Friday signed 16 bills into law, including one under which the state will provide at least 50 per cent of the cost of foster home care of homeless or neglected children in outstate Missouri.

It specifically gives the Division of Welfare the power to accept them for social services and care.

A companion bill, signed earlier, provides for 50 per cent aid in the care of such children in St. Louis and in Jackson and St. Louis counties.

In the outstate areas, where some counties are in financial trouble, the state may provide more than 50 per cent aid.

Search for Kidnap Victim

KANSAS CITY AP -- Despite the tearful appeal of her mother and an intensive search by more than 200 officers and volunteers no trace has been found of 9-year-old Denise Clinton, believed kidnaped in a motel robbery early Thursday.

Maj. James Newman, chief of detectives, said "We're urging all property ownerswithin a 10-mile radius to search their own property.

A spokesman for the Major Case Unit, a select group of officers from police and sheriff's offices in the metropolitan Kansas City area, said the FBI had officially entered the case.

Denise, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Clinton of Independence, was abducted while visiting overnight with her grandparents who manage the motel on U. S. highway 71 in Platte County, about 15 miles from downtown Kansas City.

A bandit took $256 from the motel cash drawer shortly after 2 a.m. Thursday morning and tied and gagged the grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Chelsie Reynolds. He is believed to have driven away from the motel in a white - four-door 1960 Oldsmobile.

The Reynolds freed themselves and moments later discovered Denise was missing.

Crime Spree Ends

TONOPAH, Nev. (AP) —Two Oregon murder-kidnap suspects threw away their pistols and surrendered meekly to highway patrolmen today, ending a crime spree which police say included a bank robbery, the slaying of a deputy sheriff, and kidnaping of nine persons.

The dramatic three-day chase from Oregon, through Northern California and into Nevada, ended at 3:37 a.m. when two California highway patrolmen spotted the fugitives near the Benton agricultural inspection station on the California-Nevada state line.

Ex-convicts Wilbur Marion Grey, 30, a native of Brunswick, Ga., and Carl Cletes Bowles, 24, of Amarillo, Tex., surrendered without resistance.

Their arrests came little more than an hour after they had released the last two of their hostages, Mrs. Marie Champion and her 19-month-old daughter.

Mrs. Champion — wife of California Finance Director Hale Champion —described the two gunment as "pathetic" and "really courteous all the time."

Champion, wounded slightly in the hip by a bullet fired by a Tonopah bystander, had been released earlier.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation took Grey and Bowles into custody and were to return them to Sacramento, Calif., for a hearing before a U.S. commissioner.

Nevada Highway Patrol officers and deputies had trailed the fugitive and hostages — but kept a safe distance for fear the woman and child would be killed.

After surprising two Nevada officers who had stopped to check a car near Tonopah, Bowles and Grey commandeered the officers' car. They talked frequently with officers via the police radio in the car and threatened to harm Mrs. Champion and the infant.

There was actual gunplay only once after Grey and Bowles were found in Nevada. It was in that exchange of fire that Champion was hurt.

At 12:05 a.m., Ralph Marks, a card dealer at the Club Tonopah, heard angry shouting outside the club.

"If you don't bring sandwiches in six minutes," a voice shouted, "we're coming in shooting."

When no one moved inside the club, the man opened fire. Marks fired three shot at the gunmen. One of the slugs nicked Champion in the hip.

Bowles and Grey left the woman and child in the stolen police car and fled on foot. They were walking when captured.

Health Care Action Near

WASHINGTON AP -- The Senate is expected to complete action today on a landmark bill setting up broad new health care for the aged programs and raising all Social Security benefits.

Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield Thursday got a debate limitation agreement considered certain to bring a final vote by tonight.

Under the agreement, debate on all further amendments was limited to one hour each. Two hours were allowed for a motion by Sen. Carl T. Curtis, R-Neb., to return the measure to the Finance Committee.

The Senate has disposed of 25 amendments in two days of voting so far.

Democratic leaders said they were confident of beating off any crippling changes and passing the bill with a heavy majority.

11 Days Left To Register For Election

Scott Countians have 11 days left before the books will close for voter registration for the special statewide election Aug. 17 on three constitutional amendments.

According to the office of Phil Waldman, county clerk, voters may register until July 20. One of the three amendments to be voted on would allow a Missouri governor to succeed himself once.

Registration has closed for a special election in Sikeston July 27 on the proposed $1,200,000 bond issue for water and sewage improvements.

Venereal Disease Make Comeback

Ten years ago doctors felt that venereal disease was a thing of the past.

According to Dr. Thelma Buckthorpe, Scott County health officer, doctors had a drug at that time that could eradicate this disease. But funds, facilities and personnel were put to other uses short of wiping out the disease.

For two years nothing much happened. Then syphilis and gonorrhea began to rise gradually, being most pronounced among the teenagers.

In 1964 several cases of drug-resistant gonorrhea were treated at the Scott County VD Clinic. This means that the drug that could have eliminated all VD in 1955 is no longer effective.

In Scott County there were three times the number of syphilis cases in 1964 then in 1963. Dr. Buckthorpe says that "this may be due to better reporting, which has always "left a lot to be desired."

Women to Be Well Bundled up This Fall

NEW YORK AP -- You'd think that heating houses was going out of style, the way fashion designers plan to bundle up women this fall.

Mannequins with pretty faces and well-turned legs had little chance to show off these assets, so covered were they as they paraded past fashion writers Thursday during the second day of fall previews called the American Designer Series.

Misses who wore boots at the Anne Fogarty show reappeared at the Pauline Trigere performance in spats to match their fuzzy tweed suits.

Under their cutaway jackets they wore jersey blouses with attached hoods that nearly concealed their faces. Even the sheaths in which they appeared later came with foot-high collars called cachecous, meaning neckhiders, although they hid much of the head as well.

After scurrying in and out in a flurry of styles including raincoats as full as umbrellas and tunic-like escort coats over skinny princess dresses, the models returned coddled in opulent furs.

Little white mink suits, broadtail evening gowns, chic ermine boleros worn backwards or forwards, and different kinds of scarves, all five yards long, and sometimes studded with jewels, were in the lineup of hot and high-priced fashions for fall.

On the other hand, Lilly Dache calculated to make herself the heroine of husbands by introducing heat-producing furs at bargain prices. She gave prestige to the pauper pelts--particularly squirrel, muskrat and rabbit

Communist Speech Ban Stirs State

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A law banning Communist speakers has entangled North Carolina in a web of controversy, spreading from the legislative chambers to the university campuses to the church pulpits.

The law, passed in the fading hours of the 1963 legislative session without debate or a public hearing, prohibits Communists or anyone who pleaded the Fifth Amendment during a loyalty hearing to speak on the campuses of state - supported schools.

University officials have argued the law violates academic freedom and puts politicians in charge of educational matters.

Ministers have urged repeal.

The Southern Association of Schools and Colleges has warned the law could mean loss of accreditation for those state-supported institutions of higher learning.

The legislature refused to consider repeal or amendment this session.

The matter now rests with a nine-member commission, to be appointed by the governor, the Senate president, the House speaker.

The commission is to study the issue, particularly the accreditation of the colleges and universities. A report is expected by November.

Gov. Dan K. Moore has promised to call a special legislative session should the commission suggest changes or repeal of the law.

North Carolina became the only state with such a law when the measure cleared both the Senate and House in less than 30 minutes.

When the legislature returned in 1965 for its session, the demand for repeal or amendment became a roar.

The 120 members o the North Carolina House stood 2-to-1 against repeal. The 50-member Senate was almost evenly divided.

Moore told newsmen, "Ihave received hundreds and hundreds of letters from North Carolina citizens. They favor the law by a 6-1 margin.

Woman Dies In Plunge

KENNETT -- A former Kennett woman, identified as a patient at Winter Veterans Administration Hospital at Topeka, Kan., was killed instantly Wednesday when she fell or jumped about 125 feet or more in the Kansas Statehouse.

She was identified by the hospital and items in a purse as Anna Eileen Short McClain, 43, of Memphis, Tenn., formerly of Kennett.

In Memphis, Mrs. Veda Short said the dead woman was her daughter and that she had been under treatment for a nervous disorder at the Topeka hospital. Mrs. Short said she had been advised that her daughter's condition had improved and that she expected her to return home in two weeks.

Her husband was listed as Cecil McClain of Memphis. She was in military service from March, 1945 to August, 1946. She had retired as a registered nurse.

Mrs. McClain was born in Senath. She is survived by her mother; two sons, Jimmy and Jeffrey McClain, and one daughter, Nancy McClain.

Lentz Funeral Home of Kennett will be in charge of services Friday at 2 p.m. at the chapel. Burial will be at Oak Ridge Cemtery.

Officials said Mrs. McClain fell from a stairway which leads to the dome, a popular tourist spot. The fall was 125 feet.

She struck a rotunda guard rail on the second floor, severing an arm.

On the first floor she hit a maintenance cart being pushed by Clyde Herron, statehouse employe. Herron said that he did not see or hear the woman before she hit his cart.

The statehouse has five floors of offices. From the fifth floor there is a stairway where tourists can walk to the dome, about 304 feet above the first floor, for a view of the city.

A registration book signed by persons going to the dome of the Kansas Statehouse showed "Eileen Short, Kennett, Mo."

Thad Harper, attendant at the stairs, said the woman had signed the book shortly before 9:30 a.m. She appeared normal, he said.

According to the district attorney's office, Clements allegedly took $217.64 from H. H. Phillips, owner of the Dobb's House Restaurant in Beaumont, Tex., April 3.

Texas authorities said that if Clements does not waive extradition, an all-out effort to get him back to Texas to face the embezzlement charge will be initated.

He was working at the restaurant as a manager-trainee, according to the district attorney's office.

Clements is in custody of the Sikeston police. He will appear before Judge John Hux tonight in city court on seven charges.

The city charges are: disturbing the peace, threatening an officer, improper registration, improper brakes, improper exhaust, driving while under the influence of liquor, and no city auto license.

Marines Cut Off Viet Cong

SAIGON, Viet Nam AP -- U.S. Marines made an amphibious landing on an island off their Chu Lai beachhead today and cut off a Viet Cong force that overran a Vietnamese naval headquarters, a U.S. spokesman announced.

A U. S. Navy destroyer rushed to An Hoa island 345 miles northeast of Saigon to cut off the Reds if they tried to escape by sea.

Three U. S. Navy advisers to the Vietnamese junk fleet's division headquarters were on the island when the Communist assault began. Their fate was not known.

The spokesman said the headquarters was overrun at 5 a.m. by a surprise attack but that some of the government force escaped in their junks. He said the Viet Cong force was less than a battalion in size.

Lodge Given Second Tour

WASHINGTON AP -- President Johnson has named Republican Henry Cabot Lodge, an outspoken supporter of Johnson's Vietnamese war policies, for a second tour as ambassador to South Viet Nam.

Administration officials insisted that the swtich from Ambassador Maxwell D. Taylor, who is resigning, to Lodge would mean no change in U.S. policies or major war strategy. Lodge left the Saigon post a year ago.

Lodge and Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara will fly to Saigon Wednesday for a week-long round of conferences with Taylor and American and Vietnamese officials.

This reassessment of the progress of the war could produce some new ideas, but officials here said the main purpose was to make Lodge fully acquainted with all the problems and personalities involved before he takes over.

The White House announced Thursday Taylor's resignation and the President's selection of Lodge and released a "Dear Max" letter from Johnson to Taylor saying: "We shall miss you, but no man has more fully earned the right to meet his personal obligations."

Taylor, 63, succeeded Lodge in June 1964 when Lodge resigned as ambassador to return to the United States and work for the nomination of Gov. William Scranton of Pennsylvania as Republican candidate for president. The nomination went to Barry Goldwater.

Johnson drafted Gen. Taylor from the position he then held as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff to succeed Lodge. In his letter accepting the resignation Johnson said he was "bound to honor the understanding we had at the time of your initial appointment," that Taylor would serve in Saigon for about a year.

KANSAS CITY (AP)—Robert Bolivar DePugh, leader of the Minutemen, militant right-wing anti - Communist organization, was sought today on a state kidnaping charge.

Lawrence F. Gepford, Jackson County prosecutor, said two young women had signed statements charging the 42-year-old DePugh with holding them prisoners for two weeks and trying to enlist them to seduce Communists and government officials.

Gepford said lie detector examinations given the two women indicated they were telling the truth.

Puller Request Denied

SALUDA, Va. AP -- At 67, retired Marine Lt. Gen. Lewis B. (Chesty) Puller wants to fight again. He is critical of American military efforts in Viet Nam and has requested a combat command.

"I am tired and ashamed to look the taxpayers of the United States in the face," he said in a letter to the commandment of the Marine Corps May 14, which he made public for the first time today. He stressed his experience in guerrilla warfare in Haiti and Nicaragua in the 1920s and 1930s, and his combat record in the Pacific in World War II and Korea.

In Washington, Marine Commandant Gen. Wallace M. Greene said Puller's request for reactivation had been denied.

In a letter to Puller May 27, he wrote that "under conditions as they exist today, there is no requirement for the Marine Corps to ask you to come out of retirement for active service."

Green said Puller's request was given "careful consideration" and the Marine Corps was aware of his "unique qualifications." He added, however: "Our Marines are acquitting themselves both in Viet Nam and the Dominican Republic, in the manner which is expected of them and of which we may all be proud."

Craggy and blunt as ever, and appearing physically and mentally fit, Puller answered these questions at his Tidewater home here in an interview with The Associated Press.

Q. Are you satisfied with American involvement in the Dominican Republic and Viet Nam?

A. No, definitely not.

We made a bad error in the Dominican Republic by failing to seize stores of arms, ammunition and supplies. By now they're scattered throughout Santo Domingo and in the interior. This means we'll be faced with the possibility of guerrilla warfare there for many years to come. Our Marines apparently got no further than the streets and sidewalks of Santo Domingo; they should have seized all military supplies.

In Viet Nam many things are wrong, and there are only three ways to win the war against the Communists there. First, by a full U. S. Navy blockade of the country which would halt most of the arms shipments from Communist countries. Second, forget use of helicopters and clusters and lines of fighting units and revert to attack on the Vietnamese sea coats through use of World War II landing craft. Then, chew up the country by segments by marching regiments back and forth across its narrow boundaries. Third, place a qualified American in command of all forces - including the Vietnamese forces.

Q. Do you approve of the present role of the Marines in Viet Nam?

A. Absolutely note: United States Marines traditionally have been trained as attacking fighting men -- not as policemen or night watchmen.

Q. Do we need a substantial military success before negotiations in Viet Nam?

A. Yes -- defeat of the Viet Cong.

U.S. Interest High in Viet Nam Orphans

NEW YORK AP -- As the war in Viet Nam grows, so does the interest of Americans in adopting children orphaned by the fighting, relief agencies report.

Legal red tape all but prevents actually bringing the children into U. S. homes.

But the various agencies, supported by public contributions, are caring for some 25,000 homeless children in Vet Nam, along with tens of thousands of other refugees.

A news photograph -- like other memorable pictures of the child victims of past wars -- did much to intensify Americans' desire to help. This was Associated Press Pulitzer prize-winning photographer Horst Faas' picture of a bandaged girl crying as she limped away from the Dong Xoai outpost where her parents had been killed in battle.

Offers of help poured in from all over America and abroad.

The Foster Parents program enables an individual to adopt a child by proxy- orphaned or not - contributing $15 a month to care for him in his native country. Worldwide in scope, the program now numbers 4,500 Vietnamese among the children it helps.

The first voluntary agency to go into Viet Nam and set up a relief program, at the request of the U. S. government, was the Catholic Relief Services in 1954.

This agency now cares for about 20,000 orphans at four orphanages and a huge refugee camp. It is planning construction of three more orphanages.

Two Cited After Mishaps

No Victory In Viet Nam

HONOLULU, Hawaii (AP) — Is a military victory possible in Viet Nam? Not likely in the opinion of top echelon U.S. military officials in the Pacific, who help run the war in the Southeast Asia country.

In the words of one, "The chance of total military victory for either side is remote, highly remote."

The remark increases the significance of the appointment of Henry Cabot Lodge to his second term as ambassador to South Viet Nam.

Lodge is known by military leaders as a diplomat, a politician. Maxwell D. Taylor, who resigned, is a former four-star general.

The thinking here is that Lodge has been brought back to help solve the political problem involved, if victory can't be won on the battlefield.

Camp H. M. Smith, overlooking Pearl Harbor, is an in-between nerve center of military operations involving South Viet Nam and the Far East. The men in charge o these operations freely admit that the U.S. buildup will continue. There are 60,000 U.S. servicemen in Viet Nam now. The present goal is for 75,000.

He was asked: Has the bombing of North Viet Nam had any noticeable effect on the Viet Cong guerrillas in the south?

"Indications are that the attacks are beginning to hurt," he said. "It has had some impact on infiltration but air power cannot stop it, only slow it down. The bombing has had a definite impact economically and on the morale of the Communists."

52 Perish in Canadian Crash

VANCOUVER, B. C. AP -- A four-engined airliner carrying 52 persons exploded and crashed Thursday night in central British Columbia. There were no survivors.

Officials said the last heard from the Canadian Pacific Airlines DC6B were three radioed cries of "May Day." The distress calls came about 5:10 p.m., soon after the pilot, Capt. John Alfred Steele of North Vancouver, reported he was changing courses slightly to avoid turbulent weather ahead.

Teach Respect for Law And Order, Hall Urges

WASHINGTON AP -- Rep. Durwood G. Hall, D - Mo., Thursday called for a return to the teaching of young people on how to be law abiding citizens.

If this were done, he said, U. S. foreign policy would take care of itself.

He made the comment in referring to the July 4 disturbance at Rockaway Beach in his congressional district, which he said were instigated mainly by young college men and women.

He criticized college professors he said barnstormed as self-appointed experts on foreign aid, and said the subject of so-called "teach-ins" should be changed from U. S. policy in Viet Nam to proper behavior for young men and women.

"Instead of telling Congress and the administration to abandon freedom and liberty in south Asia, let the 'teach-in' go back to fundamentals and teach respect for law and order. . .and ultimately let them teach the meaning of self respect," Hall said.

Most youths involved in the Rockaway Beach rioting were from large urban areas, Hall said.

"Does this kind of behavior indicate that the urban masses are ready to assume the responsibility of total political control which the Supreme Court has thrust upon them?" he asked in referring to the recent reapportionment rulings.

"This sickness. . .must be attributed in some degree to lack of parental supervision in the homes and the lack of exposure to principle, discipline and civic responsibility on the campus."

William H. Veale, president of the National Foundation for Highway Safety, said the following on scores of television and radio interviews in May:

"We are concerned with drinking drivers who do not realize the havoc they cause on our highways. For instance, at 50 miles per hour, your car goes 38 feet before the impulse from the brain tells you to begin-putting-on-the-brakes! If you drink just one can of beer or a whisky cocktail, there is enough alcohol in each so that for 30 minutes, the impulse to put on the brakes is slowed so that your car goes 82 feet at 50 miles an hour! 55% of our accidents involve drinking drivers.

"Fortunately, traffic is moving so we do not have as many accidents as we otherwise would.

If there is a wall or tree, we simply call the undertaker.

"When you announce a car struck a tree at a corner, that driver had been drinking. Alcohol cuts one's vision 25 percent! The driver simply did not see the tree.

"We urge everyone to be as courteous behind the wheel of an automobile as in your own home.

"If you kill someone, he won't know it BUT you will never forget it as long as you live. We say a beer or cocktail behind the wheel of an automobile is not worth that.

"Please, please never drink before or while driving!"

The lid has been carefully placed on the Bobby Baker case by a United States Senate that didn't want to investigate its own but like a well packed garbage can in the summer heat, the stench remains.

A sorry chapter of the Senate has been closed. It was a chapter revealing glimpses of the seamy side of life in the Senate -- of sex with hip-swinging call girls having friends in every branch of the federal government, of lobbyists operating without control and of fantastic profits made on the side by men with inside information at the expense of the nation's taxpayers. But the look at capitol sin was carefully controlled and greatly restricted by the Democratic majority, who didn't desire a scandal on the eve of the 1964 presidential election.

The Senate is notoriously disinclined to investigate its own and Baker was one of them from page boy to secretary to the Democratic majority, and intimate and protege of President Lyndon B. Johnson.

Neither is the Senate inclined to reform itself. So the investigation will produce only the most anemic and ineffective measures designed to prevent future wrongdoing by the Senate's own.

Into this whole sorry proceeding, Sen. B. Everett Jordan, North Carolina Democrat, chairman of the investigating committee, drew a pathetic word picture of his own lack of qualifications to act on the evidence that might have been presented to him.

As the understatement of the year he conceded that he might not have been the ideal man to undertake the investigation.

"Maybe I'm not enough lawyer, a prosecutor type, to do some of the things some people thought out to be done," he confessed with astonishing candor as the hearings closed.

"I don't think that I was equipped to do it -- an investigation to this extent."

He said in response to a question that his staff was adequate to do the job and added that he didn't have any "apologies" for the report.

Senator Jordan from the Senate viewpoint was the ideal man to sweep the Baker case filth under the rug. He was not a chairman who acted in the interest of the American people.

What Senator Jordan's inept performance accomplished in the Baker investigation, replete as it was with pulled punches, carefully covered up facts and witnesses who weren't called, was not good for the long range interest of the Democratic party or the Senate and least of all for the American people -- not "some" of them as Senator Jordan himself admitted but all of them.

The Editor acknowledges with great appreciation a copy of "The Capitol, Symbol of Freedom," from Congressman Paul C. Jones. It is one of the finest historical publications concerning our seat of government that we have had the pleasure of owning or reading.

We do not know how many copies the Congressman was allowed but if we were a citizen and interested at all in their government's procedures, we would write to the Congressman and ask for a copy.

THE BUDGET SQUEEZE

Starting its new fiscal year, Washington is doing plenty of pointing with pride. You'd think Uncle Sam was really giving the people a new deal.

We're getting a long-overdue excise tax cut, practically on the heels of equally overdue income tax reductions.

And the Administration boasts that its budget will still be squeezed below $100 billion.

But the fiscal fact is that the federal government this year will spend more than we the people will spend for all our kids' college bills, all the new cars we will buy, all our trips abroad, all the drugs and medicines we'll use and all the food all of us will eat.

How's your budget? -- NATION'S BUSINESS.

4 KEYS TO PESTICIDE SAFETY

Each year most of us use some kind of pesticide or similar chemical. But if you're a farmer, you use far more of them than most people.

It might be a relatively simple operation, such as a farmer or his wife spraying their cattle for fly control, or a more difficult operation where a farmer applies pesticides to his crops for insect control.

Whatever the operation there are four keys to chemical safety that should be followed for safe chemical use, says the National Safety Council. Every farm family should know these keys: labeling, using, storing and disposing.

To begin with, the most important thing to remember is to read the label. Read everything on the label and follow the instructions to the last word. Then:

Use the correct chemical at the right time for the job to be done.

Use the appropriate respirator when required. Wear the prescribed type of clothing or skin covering as noted on the label or on special instructions.

Be sure to wash your hands before eating or smoking when using chemicals.

Keep children away from mixing, dusting or spraying areas.

Seek prompt first aid or medical attention if a toxic chemical gets in or on your body.

Correct storage is the third step. All chemicals should be stored in a cabinet, room or building that can be locked.

To protect children and animals, promptly return to safe storage unused portions that you wish to keep.

Finally, disposal of the pesticide is important. Never throw chemical containers or small leftover amounts in garbage cans or dumps.

Always dispose of empty chemical containers immediately. Crush, break and bury metal or glass chemical containers whenever possible.

El Paso, Texas, has done something a lot of other cities should do. It has put up street signs that reflect auto headlights and can be seen from a block away . . . even at night. El Paso officials claim the new signs make it easier and safer for motorists to find their way after dark.

Most people will support President Johnson's plan to beautify and protect the "scenic corridor" -- the area within the line of sight of the nation's highways.

More and more Americans will be using the new interstate freeways in coming years, driving quickly and conveniently to parts of the country they might not otherwise have visited, seeing new landscapes and works of nature they might not otherwise have had the opportunity to enjoy.

The dumps, the junkyards, the blatant billboards will be banned from the purview of the traveling motorist. None of the ugly artifacts and discards and by-products of an industralized and urbanized civilization will be allowed to mar the esthetic quality of the passing scene.

But out of sight should not be allowed to mean out of mind, for it will not necessarily mean out of existence. The ugliness will not be so visible, but it will, too often, remain.

It is easy today to drive into our large cities on the broad backs of throughways that slice with surgical directness through congested, run-down sections -- and forget that the slums still fester beyond the antiseptic right of way.

It is easy to cruise a modern freeway that arcs with engineered effortlessness across the green countryside -- and forget that the quiet stream in the distance may be fetid with the effluvia of town and factory or that the pleasant grove of trees may screen the raw wounds of land raped for its minerals and then abandoned.

Beautification of the highway vista is important because it is along the roads that so much of our 20th-century ugliness springs up, but it is only one skirmish in the administration's war on ugliness.

Other fronts involve the preservation and protection of untouched green spaces and waterlands and the restoration of those that have become derelict, ending stream and river and air pollution, finding some new use or method of disposal for the mountains of scrapped automobiles whose metal new steel - making processes have rendered surplus.

Americans must care not only for the quality of the land they can see from the highways but also that which they may never see or visit or reside upon.

"Beauty was here and man has destroyed it to a great extent," says Anthony Celebrezze, secretary of health, education and welfare.

"The question is how we can change man's behavior to restore beauty."

HOW YOUR PROFITS AND OURS CREATE JOBS

Look around your factory or office; look at your own home and clothing . . . you'll probably find a third of all the things you see are new products developed in the past 20 years OUT OF PROFITS.

To create new products requires research -- and that takes money. To produce new products requires new and better machinery -- and that takes money. To compete with foreign goods made by cheap labor takes automated machinery operated by skilled workmen -- and both of these take money.

That money comes from profits.

For example, half the people in Warner & Swasey plants are here because we developed the Warner & Swasey Automatics at a cost in research and new equipment of more than $8,000,000 -- almost all of it saved out of profits of past years. In 1964 our profit was the highest in our history, our employment was the highest except during war, our investment in the future was highest. The same is true of most of our customers. THAT is why we are so optimistic about our country and its sound employment.

The tourist business is booming in America, and among those who aren't complaining are the nation's friendly innkeepers.

Motel proprietors, in fact, no longer regard tourists as mere customers but as guests. They say so in their advertising, and you know it must embarrass them to have to mention that the guest rooms aren't free.

But the genial host has nevertheless retained just a smidgeon of practical caution.

On the television set in his motel room, for example, the guest may find a sticker which says:

"This receiver is equipped with an electronic theft alarm so do not unplug or detach without notifying management."

And pasted on the door is this helpful reminder:

"Please check. Did you accidentally include towels or other motel property in your luggage? Your license number is on file at motel office."

Even the most obtuse guest now gets the message and mentally checks his luggage to make sure he has not thoughtlessly -- and accidentally -- included a lamp or a chair that may belong to the motel.

It is gratifying to know that such messages are never directed to the guest who is reading them. But it is sobering to reflect that they wouldn't be there if some clown hadn't done something that prompted them.

Come in as you are folks, Just make sure your hands aren't sticky.

DO YOU KNOW THIS TOWN?

Three men scurried across the intersection against the light during a break in the stream of cars. From the other side, two women shoppers ran for it.

On the curb, two young ladies of about eight years waited. The light turned green, and the two youngsters crossed safely; they were the only ones who had waited.

Two men approached the curb as the light changed, crossed just behind them.

"They set a good example, don't you think?" asked the one.

"They sure do," the other agreed.

"I'm the patrolman on this corner," said the first. "Just went off duty, changed my clothes and I'm heading for home. I get a chance to talk to them at their school around the corner a couple of times a year. That's what I always tell them: set a good example; wait for the light. You may save some grown-up's life."

Camera filters, like lenses should be handled and stored with care to keep them free of dust, fingerprints, and scratches. A dirty or scratched filter will only degrade the image-making quality of any lens with which it is used. A camel's hair brush is a good tool to use for removing dust and other foreign matter from filter surfaces; lens tissue should be used to get rid of finger smudges of other "unbrushable" blemishes. Always brush first to avoid grinding solid particles into the glass; use the lens tissue with a gentle wiping motion, breathing on the surface being cleaned if needed to help loosen stubborn smears.

CABINET STATUS NO ANSWER

When an old model becomes obsolete, industry puts its inventive powers to work, brings out a new model of superior performance and meets a market demand -- or goes out of business.

Such a rule could well be adopted by government. When a government agency's operation causes widespread dissatisfaction and criticism -- the logical solution should be to identify its weakness, improve its performance and if that is not possible, then discard it.

However, in the President's Message on the Cities to Congress, it was recommended that the Housing and Home Finance Agency be elevated to cabinet status, before determining how to improve its operation. The record of federal participation in housing and urban renewal has been one of red tape and frustration in numberless communities -- the by-passing of state governments -- and the programs rarely if ever lived up to the expectations of the community-at-large.

Until this dissatisfaction and criticism has been impartially evaluated, it would seem inappropriate to promote the failures as well as the successes to the level of cabinet prestige -- giving a sense of permanency to the operation.

Mr. Robert Weaver, HHFA's administrator, indicating that legislative proposals were under consideration observed it was "no time to admit failures," and acknowledged that there was dissatisfaction with aspects of the program and they were still "groping our way."

Rather than cabinet status, the Federal Housing Administration and the Federal Mortgage Association should be transferred to either the Commerce or Treasury Department as more appropriate jurisdiction along with the hospital and college housing loan programs.

This would leave only the Public Housing Administration and the variety of urban programs under HHFA. Their size and scope, together or singly, do not merit cabinet stature.

THE SILENT AMERICANS

A mood of drift and despair is at large in the land. Many of the victims of its gloomy infection were once - proud American patriots.

They have contended long and hard for what they are convinced is right principle. They believe in personal freedom and national independence as the twin cornerstones of the American heritage. Now they are discouraged because their words of wisdom and warning so often go unheeded. Some are silent because they have concluded that all is lost.

Had our first patriots followed this unhappy example, we would have no country to love, no heritage to honor and no history of which to be proud.

Even if the worst were true, even if there were no hope for freedom's survival, this would not relieve men who know the truth and right from their duty to speak out. In fact, so long as free speech is still permitted, hope remains in spite of all doomcriers.

Any trend of history can be reversed if enough men will it. Any man's words may become the spark lighting the fire of determination to save freedom in the souls of others. In the darkest hour, each man needs his brightest torch. It is too late not to try.

Let us hear again from the newly silent Americans. Let them not measure their mark on history by size of audiences and numbers of votes. Truth is more powerful than an army with banners. The silence of men who know truth and right is an invitation to their destroyers to proceed. HLH

There have been loud outcries against the phasing out of old Defense Dept. installations. I asked Secretary of Defense McNamara what was being done to help those employes who have been caught up in the closings. Here is his reply in which the Secretary discloses for the first time the unique system devised to help those facing loss of jobs:

By Robert S. McNamara
Secretary of Defense

Washington, D. C.: The Department of Defense today shares a personnel management problem which confronts many industrial firms: how do we keep abreast of rapidly changing technology while meeting the legitimate needs of our work force?

Changes in the extent of location of bases and installations, for example, are absolutely essential if we are to be responsive to developing technology and military planning. Yet it is also essential that the burden of adjusting to these changes should not fall primarily on the individual employes of those installations.

I believe the department, as a responsible employer, can and must assume the major part of that burden as a necessary cost of doing business in a rapidly changing world. And I am certain that it is in the best interests of the government to retain in its employ as many of its skilled and experienced career employes as possible.

In recognition of this challenge, we have initiated a series of far-reaching measures to ease the impact of change on Department of Defense career employes. Among these are: phasing out bases over a period of time, normally from one to four years, which takes advantage of the ordinary attrition rate in the work force; paying the moving expenses of displaced employes to other locations in the Department of Defense; retaining original pay opportunities for a period of two years for employes who accept positions at lower grades; discontinuing appointments (or hiring only temporary personnel) in employment categories where large surpluses of career employes exist or can be anticipated; retraining displaced employes for new jobs and maintaining their compensation during retraining; working with the Civil Service Commission to find jobs for Department of Defense employes in other federal agencies; working with the Department of Labor to counsel, test, and refer interested employes to private industry; maintaining a computer-operated, nation-wide referral system to locate the innumerable job opportunities which arise through normal attrition within the Department of Defense.

The last feature, a nationwide priority job referral system for displaced employes, is relatively new and has some unique features which offer much promise. The use of computers has made it possible for us to centralize and speed up the complicated task of matching the skills of displaced employes to vacancies which, through normal personnel turnover, occur regularly throughout the Department of Defense's huge work force approximating one million civilian employes. This is now being accomplished through a single Centralized Referral Activity (CRA), which was established on an operational basis March 1, 1965.

Briefly, the Centralized Referral Activity works in this way: the displaced employes are described in terms of their individual skills or fields of specialization, and of the salary and locations they are willing to accept. This information is stored at the CRA in Dayton, Ohio, on magnetic tape. Every few days, the CRA sends out "stopper lists" displaying the job categories for which qualified employes are already available.

Installations receiving these lists are not permitted to fill any existing vacancies in the listed categories by hiring new employes, or, in some circumstances, even by promotion. Rather, they must send a requisition to the CRA, which then prints out a priority placement certificate containing the names of the employes registered as qualified for the job. The installation with the vacancy then arranges directly for employment of any individual listed with the organization which no longer needs him.

This system is invoked only when the difficulty of placing employes requires department-wide efforts. Otherwise, normal placement and reassignment procedures of individual commands, the military departments or the various defense agencies are used.

In the first three months of the CRA's operation, over 1600 registrants were placed, about one-half from priority placement certificates, the balance from supplementary programs. Obviously, employes must be placed where jobs exist and frequent moving is necessary. About 54 per cent of the registrants in the Department of Defense nationwide referral system who have been placed to date moved from their present areas to another location in the department.

Although employe moving expenses are currently paid by the government, concern that employes might incur expenses above the present limitations led the President to propose legislation which would allow substantial increases in such compensation. For those employes who cannot be given new jobs in their present locations, who do not elect to move, and who are not eligible for retirement, the President has proposed severance payments that will assist them substantially in making the transition to other employment. These proposals for increased transportation expenses and severance pay are now receiving active consideration in the Congress and are strongly supported by the Department of Defense.

Neither the Centralized Referral Activity, nor any of the other measures undertaken within the Department of Defense, constitutes a panacea for the problem of technological change and employe dislocation. These measures do illustrate, however, that there is much that management can do, and I firmly believe must do, to cope with the effect of management decisions on the careers of those employes who are affected.

In this era, we do not have a surplus of skilled labor. Far from it. The problem is to match the skills to the jobs--and this is a problem which no modern society can afford to leave unsolved.

KHE SANH, South Viet Nam (AP) — Life is so unlikely among the Vietnamese mountain tribespeople that a child isn't even given a name until its first birthday.

Since many infants die before they are a year old, there doesn't seem much point in naming them until they have at least a 50-50 chance of growing up.

Mountain folk are always interesting to outsiders, who find their ways quaint, repulsive, but full of a primitive charm.

The hillbillies here are no exception. They are members of a Montagnard tribe called the Brous, which rhymes with booze. They live in rugged hills amid rich green jungle drapery a few miles south of the demilitarized zone that theoretically divides this war - torn land.

The Brous are small, slender, dark-skinned people with an intensely black thatch of hair that gives them a wild look.

To anybody but a fellow Brou, the life of the ordinary Brou would seem insufferable. He dwells at a bare survival level. Some work on a French-owned coffee plantation; others till arid hillside patches.

Gastronomically speaking, the Brous' motto seems to be: "If it is smaller than you and can't get away, eat it. You never know where your next meal is coming from."

You see many small dogs around Brou hamlets, but rarely any big older dogs. As soon as they reach an appetizing size, most dogs go into the pot. Among other things the Brous put in the pot are lizards, cats, rats and monkeys.

The chief war weapon of the Brous formerly was the crossbow.

The wooden crossbow is a silent, deadly and effective tool for closeup jungle hunting. The tiny bamboo arrows are tipped with a poison made from tree gum. The poison affects the blood of a game animal but not the meat.

Brou children start courting at 12 or 13 and marry at 15 or 16. The moral standards of married Brous are a cut above civilized conduct. Wife swapping appears unheard of, and the price of adultery may be a poisoned arrow through the heart.

The Brous use any excuse to throw a party, whether it's a wedding, funeral, or just that the moon seems right. The men gather around a crock of home-brew made from rice or potatoes, and proceed to get crocked. The chief takes a gulp through a 6-foot-long straw stuck into the crock, then passes it to the honored guests.

"After you get a quick flash of his bridgework, you have to close your eyes when it's your turn to sip," said one American thus honored.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- Luci Baines Johnson first became interested in the Catholic church through her friend Beth Jenkins, daughter of Walter Jenkins, onetime assistant to President Johnson. Beth has been a student at Marquette University, and it was she who helped Luci arrange her incognito trip to Milwaukee when the President spoke in Chicago last month.

Beth is about four years older than Luci, and the two girls long have been close friends.

At one time President Johnson expected both of his daughters to become Catholics, and so told Pat Brown of California, himself a Catholic convert.

This was because Lynda Bird, the eldest daughter, has been dating a Catholic boy for some time. The President and Mrs. Johnson have not tried to influence their daughters' religious views, but they have discreetly advised against early marriage.

That both Lynda and Luci have been squired by Catholic boys on so many occasions probably results from the fact that most of the military aides at the White House are Catholics. This is not by deliberate design, but rather because White House Society duty is a volunteer matter, in addition to normal military duty. The young officers who serve at the White House must put in a full day with the Army, Navy, or Air Force, then work in the evening at the White House on top of this.

Apparently not as many Protestant or Jewish officers have applied for this extra duty as have Catholic officers. It has been discreetly suggested to the Pentagon that there might be more of a religious mixture, with a few Protestant and Jewish officers sent to the White House for social duty.

Note: The Job of a Military Aide at the White House is to conduct distinguished guests up to the receiving line during official dinners and receptions and to make sure that everything goes right. These occasions frequently involve kings, queens, presidents, visiting Prime Ministers and Foreign Ministers.

NEW FRIENDS

The United States and the Soviet Union may be experiencing strained relations, over North Viet Nam, but one of the most virulent institutional critics of Russia in the past, Georgetown University, is now awash with Russian schoolteachers. They are living in the dormitories and studying American methods of teaching English.

To those who knew Georgetown University in the past, this is just as Revolutionary as the Bolshevik 1917 Revolution. It illustrates the change in the Catholic Church and the innovations wrought by Pope John.

During the 1920-30's the forefront of Anti-Russian opposition in the nation's capital was the famous Jesuit Institution, Georgetown University. Its Foreign Service School was dominated by Reverend Edmund Walsh, who spoke repeatedly and effectively against any relations with Russia. He not only opposed Roosevelt's recognition of the Soviet Union in 1934, but once made a speech at the Air Force War College at Maxwell Field, Ala., advocating preventive war against the Soviet Union.

History has now revealed that the original inspiration for the late Joe McCarthy's anti-Communist binge, which changed the course of U. S. Foreign Policy, came from Georgetown University. Some of the Jesuit Fathers sold McCarthy on the idea that there were "207 card-carrying Communists in the State Department," and he made a Senate speech to that effect; And then was faced with the task of proving his charges --which he failed to do.

After the McCarthy Investigation was over and after the Eisenhower Administration had appointed one of McCarthy's aides, Scott McLeod, in charge of State Department personnel, McLeod came up with the official statement that not one Communist had been discovered in the State Department.

AWASH WITH COMMUNISTS

Father Walsh also had a profound effect upon State Department personnel through his Foreign Service School, one of his close friends being Robert Kelley, in charge of State Department Russian relations.

By training young diplomats at his Foreign Service School, Father Walsh also gave an anti-Russian slant to American foreign policy for many years.

It took Pope John and to some extent the first Catholic President of the United States, with his coexistence speech at American University in June 1963, to change this.

This summer Georgetown has helped twenty - seven Russian schoolteachers spend ten weeks in Washington studying English teaching methods. They are living at the same Institution where Luci, the church's latest convert, will study nursing, and they are getting the benefit of Georgetown teachers and being entertained in friendly fashion by the faculty and neighbors.

In Moscow the leaders of the Kremlin this year boycotted the American Embassy's 4th of July reception. But in Washington the twenty-seven Soviet teachers came out to the Pearson farm in adjacent Maryland to relax on Independence Day, where they spoke pleasantly of their Catholic hosts and of their relations with the American people.

Subsequently Mrs. P. was describing this holiday interlude to Father Joseph F. Thorning of Mount St. Mary Seminary and to a Washington broker.

"I don't think that's much of a story," remarked the broker.

"I rather think it is," remarked Father Thorning.

It having been a rainy day, it was suggested the headline might be: "Georgetown University is Awash with Communists."

William H. Veale, president of the National Foundation for Highway Safety, said the following on scores of television and radio interviews in May:

"We are concerned with drinking drivers who do not realize the havoc they cause on our highways. For instance, at 50 miles per hour, your car goes 38 feet before the impulse from the brain tells you to begin-putting-on-the-brakes! If you drink just one can of beer or a whisky cocktail, there is enough alcohol in each so that for 30 minutes, the impulse to put on the brakes is slowed so that your car goes 82 feet at 50 miles an hour! 55% of our accidents involve drinking drivers.

"Fortunately, traffic is moving so we do not have as many accidents as we otherwise would.

If there is a wall or tree, we simply call the undertaker.

"When you announce a car struck a tree at a corner, that driver had been drinking. Alcohol cuts one's vision 25 percent! The driver simply did not see the tree.

"We urge everyone to be as courteous behind the wheel of an automobile as in your own home.

"If you kill someone, he won't know it BUT you will never forget it as long as you live. We say a beer or cocktail behind the wheel of an automobile is not worth that.

"Please, please never drink before or while driving!"

The lid has been carefully placed on the Bobby Baker case by a United States Senate that didn't want to investigate its own but like a well packed garbage can in the summer heat, the stench remains.

A sorry chapter of the Senate has been closed. It was a chapter revealing glimpses of the seamy side of life in the Senate -- of sex with hip-swinging call girls having friends in every branch of the federal government, of lobbyists operating without control and of fantastic profits made on the side by men with inside information at the expense of the nation's taxpayers. But the look at capitol sin was carefully controlled and greatly restricted by the Democratic majority, who didn't desire a scandal on the eve of the 1964 presidential election.

The Senate is notoriously disinclined to investigate its own and Baker was one of them from page boy to secretary to the Democratic majority, and intimate and protege of President Lyndon B. Johnson.

Neither is the Senate inclined to reform itself. So the investigation will produce only the most anemic and ineffective measures designed to prevent future wrongdoing by the Senate's own.

Into this whole sorry proceeding, Sen. B. Everett Jordan, North Carolina Democrat, chairman of the investigating committee, drew a pathetic word picture of his own lack of qualifications to act on the evidence that might have been presented to him.

As the understatement of the year he conceded that he might not have been the ideal man to undertake the investigation.

"Maybe I'm not enough lawyer, a prosecutor type, to do some of the things some people thought out to be done," he confessed with astonishing candor as the hearings closed.

"I don't think that I was equipped to do it -- an investigation to this extent."

He said in response to a question that his staff was adequate to do the job and added that he didn't have any "apologies" for the report.

Senator Jordan from the Senate viewpoint was the ideal man to sweep the Baker case filth under the rug. He was not a chairman who acted in the interest of the American people.

What Senator Jordan's inept performance accomplished in the Baker investigation, replete as it was with pulled punches, carefully covered up facts and witnesses who weren't called, was not good for the long range interest of the Democratic party or the Senate and least of all for the American people -- not "some" of them as Senator Jordan himself admitted but all of them.

THE BUDGET SQUEEZE

Starting its new fiscal year, Washington is doing plenty of pointing with pride. You'd think Uncle Sam was really giving the people a new deal.

We're getting a long-overdue excise tax cut, practically on the heels of equally overdue income tax reductions.

And the Administration boasts that its budget will still be squeezed below $100 billion.

But the fiscal fact is that the federal government this year will spend more than we the people will spend for all our kids' college bills, all the new cars we will buy, all our trips abroad, all the drugs and medicines we'll use and all the food all of us will eat.

How's your budget? -- NATION'S BUSINESS.

4 KEYS TO PESTICIDE SAFETY

Each year most of us use some kind of pesticide or similar chemical. But if you're a farmer, you use far more of them than most people.

It might be a relatively simple operation, such as a farmer or his wife spraying their cattle for fly control, or a more difficult operation where a farmer applies pesticides to his crops for insect control.

Whatever the operation there are four keys to chemical safety that should be followed for safe chemical use, says the National Safety Council. Every farm family should know these keys: labeling, using, storing and disposing.

To begin with, the most important thing to remember is to read the label. Read everything on the label and follow the instructions to the last word. Then:

Use the correct chemical at the right time for the job to be done.

Use the appropriate respirator when required. Wear the prescribed type of clothing or skin covering as noted on the label or on special instructions.

Be sure to wash your hands before eating or smoking when using chemicals.

Keep children away from mixing, dusting or spraying areas.

Seek prompt first aid or medical attention if a toxic chemical gets in or on your body.

Correct storage is the third step. All chemicals should be stored in a cabinet, room or building that can be locked.

To protect children and animals, promptly return to safe storage unused portions that you wish to keep.

Finally, disposal of the pesticide is important. Never throw chemical containers or small leftover amounts in garbage cans or dumps.

Always dispose of empty chemical containers immediately. Crush, break and bury metal or glass chemical containers whenever possible.

El Paso, Texas, has done something a lot of other cities should do. It has put up street signs that reflect auto headlights and can be seen from a block away . . . even at night. El Paso officials claim the new signs make it easier and safer for motorists to find their way after dark.

Most people will support President Johnson's plan to beautify and protect the "scenic corridor" -- the area within the line of sight of the nation's highways.

More and more Americans will be using the new interstate freeways in coming years, driving quickly and conveniently to parts of the country they might not otherwise have visited, seeing new landscapes and works of nature they might not otherwise have had the opportunity to enjoy.

The dumps, the junkyards, the blatant billboards will be banned from the purview of the traveling motorist. None of the ugly artifacts and discards and by-products of an industralized and urbanized civilization will be allowed to mar the esthetic quality of the passing scene.

But out of sight should not be allowed to mean out of mind, for it will not necessarily mean out of existence. The ugliness will not be so visible, but it will, too often, remain.

It is easy today to drive into our large cities on the broad backs of throughways that slice with surgical directness through congested, run-down sections -- and forget that the slums still fester beyond the antiseptic right of way.

It is easy to cruise a modern freeway that arcs with engineered effortlessness across the green countryside -- and forget that the quiet stream in the distance may be fetid with the effluvia of town and factory or that the pleasant grove of trees may screen the raw wounds of land raped for its minerals and then abandoned.

Beautification of the highway vista is important because it is along the roads that so much of our 20th-century ugliness springs up, but it is only one skirmish in the administration's war on ugliness.

Other fronts involve the preservation and protection of untouched green spaces and waterlands and the restoration of those that have become derelict, ending stream and river and air pollution, finding some new use or method of disposal for the mountains of scrapped automobiles whose metal new steel - making processes have rendered surplus.

Americans must care not only for the quality of the land they can see from the highways but also that which they may never see or visit or reside upon.

"Beauty was here and man has destroyed it to a great extent," says Anthony Celebrezze, secretary of health, education and welfare.

"The question is how we can change man's behavior to restore beauty."

The tourist business is booming in America, and among those who aren't complaining are the nation's friendly innkeepers.

Motel proprietors, in fact, no longer regard tourists as mere customers but as guests. They say so in their advertising, and you know it must embarrass them to have to mention that the guest rooms aren't free.

But the genial host has nevertheless retained just a smidgeon of practical caution.

On the television set in his motel room, for example, the guest may find a sticker which says:

"This receiver is equipped with an electronic theft alarm so do not unplug or detach without notifying management."

And pasted on the door is this helpful reminder:

"Please check. Did you accidentally include towels or other motel property in your luggage? Your license number is on file at motel office."

Even the most obtuse guest now gets the message and mentally checks his luggage to make sure he has not thoughtlessly -- and accidentally -- included a lamp or a chair that may belong to the motel.

It is gratifying to know that such messages are never directed to the guest who is reading them. But it is sobering to reflect that they wouldn't be there if some clown hadn't done something that prompted them.

Come in as you are folks, Just make sure your hands aren't sticky.

DO YOU KNOW THIS TOWN?

Three men scurried across the intersection against the light during a break in the stream of cars. From the other side, two women shoppers ran for it.

On the curb, two young ladies of about eight years waited. The light turned green, and the two youngsters crossed safely; they were the only ones who had waited.

Two men approached the curb as the light changed, crossed just behind them.

"They set a good example, don't you think?" asked the one.

"They sure do," the other agreed.

"I'm the patrolman on this corner," said the first. "Just went off duty, changed my clothes and I'm heading for home. I get a chance to talk to them at their school around the corner a couple of times a year. That's what I always tell them: set a good example; wait for the light. You may save some grown-up's life."

REST HIS SOUL

A man died and the preacher came to his wife to find something about him to say in the eulogy.

"Is he a Mason, an Elk, a Ku-Klux-Klan?" asked the preacher.

The preacher than explained, "That's a devil under the sheet."

The wife's eyes glowed with memory as she said: "He sure was!"

Camera filters, like lenses should be handled and stored with care to keep them free of dust, fingerprints, and scratches. A dirty or scratched filter will only degrade the image-making quality of any lens with which it is used. A camel's hair brush is a good tool to use for removing dust and other foreign matter from filter surfaces; lens tissue should be used to get rid of finger smudges of other "unbrushable" blemishes. Always brush first to avoid grinding solid particles into the glass; use the lens tissue with a gentle wiping motion, breathing on the surface being cleaned if needed to help loosen stubborn smears.

CABINET STATUS NO ANSWER

When an old model becomes obsolete, industry puts its inventive powers to work, brings out a new model of superior performance and meets a market demand -- or goes out of business.

Such a rule could well be adopted by government. When a government agency's operation causes widespread dissatisfaction and criticism -- the logical solution should be to identify its weakness, improve its performance and if that is not possible, then discard it.

However, in the President's Message on the Cities to Congress, it was recommended that the Housing and Home Finance Agency be elevated to cabinet status, before determining how to improve its operation. The record of federal participation in housing and urban renewal has been one of red tape and frustration in numberless communities -- the by-passing of state governments -- and the programs rarely if ever lived up to the expectations of the community-at-large.

Until this dissatisfaction and criticism has been impartially evaluated, it would seem inappropriate to promote the failures as well as the successes to the level of cabinet prestige -- giving a sense of permanency to the operation.

Mr. Robert Weaver, HHFA's administrator, indicating that legislative proposals were under consideration observed it was "no time to admit failures," and acknowledged that there was dissatisfaction with aspects of the program and they were still "groping our way."

Rather than cabinet status, the Federal Housing Administration and the Federal Mortgage Association should be transferred to either the Commerce or Treasury Department as more appropriate jurisdiction along with the hospital and college housing loan programs.

This would leave only the Public Housing Administration and the variety of urban programs under HHFA. Their size and scope, together or singly, do not merit cabinet stature.

THE SILENT AMERICANS

A mood of drift and despair is at large in the land. Many of the victims of its gloomy infection were once - proud American patriots.

They have contended long and hard for what they are convinced is right principle. They believe in personal freedom and national independence as the twin cornerstones of the American heritage. Now they are discouraged because their words of wisdom and warning so often go unheeded. Some are silent because they have concluded that all is lost.

Had our first patriots followed this unhappy example, we would have no country to love, no heritage to honor and no history of which to be proud.

Even if the worst were true, even if there were no hope for freedom's survival, this would not relieve men who know the truth and right from their duty to speak out. In fact, so long as free speech is still permitted, hope remains in spite of all doomcriers.

Any trend of history can be reversed if enough men will it. Any man's words may become the spark lighting the fire of determination to save freedom in the souls of others. In the darkest hour, each man needs his brightest torch. It is too late not to try.

Let us hear again from the newly silent Americans. Let them not measure their mark on history by size of audiences and numbers of votes. Truth is more powerful than an army with banners. The silence of men who know truth and right is an invitation to their destroyers to proceed. HLH

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- Luci Baines Johnson first became interested in the Catholic church through her friend Beth Jenkins, daughter of Walter Jenkins, onetime assistant to President Johnson. Beth has been a student at Marquette University, and it was she who helped Luci arrange her incognito trip to Milwaukee when the President spoke in Chicago last month.

Beth is about four years older than Luci, and the two girls long have been close friends.

At one time President Johnson expected both of his daughters to become Catholics, and so told Pat Brown of California, himself a Catholic convert.

This was because Lynda Bird, the eldest daughter, has been dating a Catholic boy for some time. The President and Mrs. Johnson have not tried to influence their daughters' religious views, but they have discreetly advised against early marriage.

That both Lynda and Luci have been squired by Catholic boys on so many occasions probably results from the fact that most of the military aides at the White House are Catholics. This is not by deliberate design, but rather because White House Society duty is a volunteer matter, in addition to normal military duty. The young officers who serve at the White House must put in a full day with the Army, Navy, or Air Force, then work in the evening at the White House on top of this.

Apparently not as many Protestant or Jewish officers have applied for this extra duty as have Catholic officers. It has been discreetly suggested to the Pentagon that there might be more of a religious mixture, with a few Protestant and Jewish officers sent to the White House for social duty.

Note: The Job of a Military Aide at the White House is to conduct distinguished guests up to the receiving line during official dinners and receptions and to make sure that everything goes right. These occasions frequently involve kings, queens, presidents, visiting Prime Ministers and Foreign Ministers.

NEW FRIENDS

The United States and the Soviet Union may be experiencing strained relations, over North Viet Nam, but one of the most virulent institutional critics of Russia in the past, Georgetown University, is now awash with Russian schoolteachers. They are living in the dormitories and studying American methods of teaching English.

To those who knew Georgetown University in the past, this is just as Revolutionary as the Bolshevik 1917 Revolution. It illustrates the change in the Catholic Church and the innovations wrought by Pope John.

During the 1920-30's the forefront of Anti-Russian opposition in the nation's capital was the famous Jesuit Institution, Georgetown University. Its Foreign Service School was dominated by Reverend Edmund Walsh, who spoke repeatedly and effectively against any relations with Russia. He not only opposed Roosevelt's recognition of the Soviet Union in 1934, but once made a speech at the Air Force War College at Maxwell Field, Ala., advocating preventive war against the Soviet Union.

History has now revealed that the original inspiration for the late Joe McCarthy's anti-Communist binge, which changed the course of U. S. Foreign Policy, came from Georgetown University. Some of the Jesuit Fathers sold McCarthy on the idea that there were "207 card-carrying Communists in the State Department," and he made a Senate speech to that effect; And then was faced with the task of proving his charges --which he failed to do.

After the McCarthy Investigation was over and after the Eisenhower Administration had appointed one of McCarthy's aides, Scott McLeod, in charge of State Department personnel, McLeod came up with the official statement that not one Communist had been discovered in the State Department.

AWASH WITH COMMUNISTS

Father Walsh also had a profound effect upon State Department personnel through his Foreign Service School, one of his close friends being Robert Kelley, in charge of State Department Russian relations.

By training young diplomats at his Foreign Service School, Father Walsh also gave an anti-Russian slant to American foreign policy for many years.

It took Pope John and to some extent the first Catholic President of the United States, with his coexistence speech at American University in June 1963, to change this.

This summer Georgetown has helped twenty - seven Russian schoolteachers spend ten weeks in Washington studying English teaching methods. They are living at the same Institution where Luci, the church's latest convert, will study nursing, and they are getting the benefit of Georgetown teachers and being entertained in friendly fashion by the faculty and neighbors.

In Moscow the leaders of the Kremlin this year boycotted the American Embassy's 4th of July reception. But in Washington the twenty-seven Soviet teachers came out to the Pearson farm in adjacent Maryland to relax on Independence Day, where they spoke pleasantly of their Catholic hosts and of their relations with the American people.

Subsequently Mrs. P. was describing this holiday interlude to Father Joseph F. Thorning of Mount St. Mary Seminary and to a Washington broker.

"I don't think that's much of a story," remarked the broker.

"I rather think it is," remarked Father Thorning.

It having been a rainy day, it was suggested the headline might be: "Georgetown University is Awash with Communists."

McNamara Discloses New Electronic System of Finding Jobs For Defense Dept. Workers Caught in Closings

There have been loud outcries against the phasing out of old Defense Dept. installations. I asked Secretary of Defense McNamara what was being done to help those employes who have been caught up in the closings. Here is his reply in which the Secretary discloses for the first time the unique system devised to help those facing loss of jobs:

By Robert S. McNamara
Secretary of Defense

Washington, D. C.: The Department of Defense today shares a personnel management problem which confronts many industrial firms: how do we keep abreast of rapidly changing technology while meeting the legitimate needs of our work force?

Changes in the extent of location of bases and installations, for example, are absolutely essential if we are to be responsive to developing technology and military planning. Yet it is also essential that the burden of adjusting to these changes should not fall primarily on the individual employes of those installations.

I believe the department, as a responsible employer, can and must assume the major part of that burden as a necessary cost of doing business in a rapidly changing world. And I am certain that it is in the best interests of the government to retain in its employ as many of its skilled and experienced career employes as possible.

In recognition of this challenge, we have initiated a series of far-reaching measures to ease the impact of change on Department of Defense career employes. Among these are: phasing out bases over a period of time, normally from one to four years, which takes advantage of the ordinary attrition rate in the work force; paying the moving expenses of displaced employes to other locations in the Department of Defense; retaining original pay opportunities for a period of two years for employes who accept positions at lower grades; discontinuing appointments (or hiring only temporary personnel) in employment categories where large surpluses of career employes exist or can be anticipated; retraining displaced employes for new jobs and maintaining their compensation during retraining; working with the Civil Service Commission to find jobs for Department of Defense employes in other federal agencies; working with the Department of Labor to counsel, test, and refer interested employes to private industry; maintaining a computer-operated, nation-wide referral system to locate the innumerable job opportunities which arise through normal attrition within the Department of Defense.

The last feature, a nationwide priority job referral system for displaced employes, is relatively new and has some unique features which offer much promise. The use of computers has made it possible for us to centralize and speed up the complicated task of matching the skills of displaced employes to vacancies which, through normal personnel turnover, occur regularly throughout the Department of Defense's huge work force approximating one million civilian employes. This is now being accomplished through a single Centralized Referral Activity (CRA), which was established on an operational basis March 1, 1965.

Briefly, the Centralized Referral Activity works in this way: the displaced employes are described in terms of their individual skills or fields of specialization, and of the salary and locations they are willing to accept. This information is stored at the CRA in Dayton, Ohio, on magnetic tape. Every few days, the CRA sends out "stopper lists" displaying the job categories for which qualified employes are already available.

Installations receiving these lists are not permitted to fill any existing vacancies in the listed categories by hiring new employes, or, in some circumstances, even by promotion. Rather, they must send a requisition to the CRA, which then prints out a priority placement certificate containing the names of the employes registered as qualified for the job. The installation with the vacancy then arranges directly for employment of any individual listed with the organization which no longer needs him.

This system is invoked only when the difficulty of placing employes requires department-wide efforts. Otherwise, normal placement and reassignment procedures of individual commands, the military departments or the various defense agencies are used.

In the first three months of the CRA's operation, over 1600 registrants were placed, about one-half from priority placement certificates, the balance from supplementary programs. Obviously, employes must be placed where jobs exist and frequent moving is necessary. About 54 per cent of the registrants in the Department of Defense nationwide referral system who have been placed to date moved from their present areas to another location in the department.

Although employe moving expenses are currently paid by the government, concern that employes might incur expenses above the present limitations led the President to propose legislation which would allow substantial increases in such compensation. For those employes who cannot be given new jobs in their present locations, who do not elect to move, and who are not eligible for retirement, the President has proposed severance payments that will assist them substantially in making the transition to other employment. These proposals for increased transportation expenses and severance pay are now receiving active consideration in the Congress and are strongly supported by the Department of Defense.

Neither the Centralized Referral Activity, nor any of the other measures undertaken within the Department of Defense, constitutes a panacea for the problem of technological change and employe dislocation. These measures do illustrate, however, that there is much that management can do, and I firmly believe must do, to cope with the effect of management decisions on the careers of those employes who are affected.

In this era, we do not have a surplus of skilled labor. Far from it. The problem is to match the skills to the jobs--and this is a problem which no modern society can afford to leave unsolved.

Mrs. Ronald Gene Galemore

Carol Jane Bartholomew Says Vows With Ronald Galemore

Soft candlelight illumed the beautiful nuptial setting for one of the loveliest weddings of the early summer season, Sunday, the twenty-seventh of June, in the First Baptist Church in Sikeston, when Miss Carol Jane Bartholomew, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Henry Bartholomew, Sr., Sikeston, became the bride of Ronald Gene Galemore, elder son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe B. Galemore, Charleston.

The double - ring ceremony was performed by Dr. E. D. Owen of Cape Girardeau, former pastor of the bride, in the presence of many friends and relatives.

The bridal couple pledged their vows beneath a large brass arch with arrangements of stock placed on a pedestal on either side. Appointing each side of the arch were two large seventeen - branch candelabra which were adorned with large white satin bows and held glowing white cathedral tapers. Immediately behind the arch was a small nine-branch candlelabra holding glowing white cathedral tapers. Twelve single candlelabra were placed across the front of the altar. Immediately before the arch was the white peau do soie kneeling bench where the bridal couple knelt for the benediction.

Four single brass candlelabra holding glowing white cathedral tapers and adorned with white satin bows lined the bridal aisle which was covered with the traditional white bridal carpet. The bridal aisle was marked off by white satin bows and streamers and closed off except to the bridal party.

Nuptial music was provided by Miss Shirley J. Altom at the organ. Miss Altom was attired in a sky-blue summer satin brocade floor-length gown. A white carnation corsage accented in blue completed her attire. She accompanied Michael Lee, soloist, who sang "I Love Thee," and "The Lord's Prayer."

GIVEN BY FATHER

Upon the chimes of the traditional wedding march, the radiant bride approached the altar on the arm of her father who escorted her down the bridal aisle and gave her in marriage. For her wedding the bride chose an exquisite pure white peau de soie creation fashioned with scoop neckline and long tapered sleeves that came to a point over the hands and were closed with tiny self-covered buttons at the wrists. The bodice was overlaid with reembroidered alencon lace motifs. The motifs were repeated around the scoop neckline and again in the long dome-shaped skirt. The back fell into a coachman with self-trimmed bow at the waistline of the long-sweep train which had lace motifs in the swallowed-tailed train.

She wore a headpiece fashioned in a dainty princess crown of seed pearls and attached to this was a waist length veil of pure silk illusion with lace motifs around the bottom edge. The bride carried a large cascade arrangement of two dozen white butterfly roses with white satin streamers tied in lovers' knots. Attached to her bridal bouquet was a pure linen and lace handkerchief which had been carried by her matron of honor, Mrs. Larry L. Gardner, in her wedding. The bride's only jewelry was a white gold necklace with a diamond pendant, a gift of the groom. White peau de soie slippers completed her bridal attire. The bride carried out "the something old, something new, something borrowed, and something blue" theme in her bridal attire.

Miss Bartholomew chose Mrs. Larry L. Gardner of New Madrid as her matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Sandra Ferguson of Crayne, Kentucky, a former college roommate of the bride, Miss Linda Johnson, and Mrs. Ronald Cullins, cousin of the groom. They were attired identically in dresses fashioned with romance-blue chantilly lace bodices with deep renascence necklines and long tapered sleeves. The floor-length, pencil-slim skirts were of organza over satin. Bias bands of self fabric encircled the empire waistlines and self-tailored bows enhanced the back waistlines. They wore matching headpieces of romance blue. Their circular nosetip veils were secured to princess crowns of seed pearls. They each carried large cascade arrangements of blue-tipped carnations with blue satin streamers tied in lovers' knots. Romance blue tinted slippers completed their attire.

Little Miss Sheila Ann Estes of Portageville, cousin of the bride, served as flower girl. She carried a white basket trimmed with blue satin bows and filled with blue-tipped carnation pedals. Miss Carolyn Galemore, Bertrand, and Miss Claudia Mulcahy, Sikeston, both cousins of the groom, served as candlelighters. Miss Jamie Galemore, Bertrand, cousin of the groom was in charge of the rice bags. She carried a large white basket trimmed with large white bows and tulle, and filled with individual rice bags of blue-tinted rice and blue ribbon. The girls were attired identically in ice blue chantilly lace bodices with jewell necklines and elbow - length sleeves. The floor-length A-line skirts were organza over satin. Bias bands of self fabric encircled the empire waistlines and self-tailored bows enhanced the back waistlines. They wore blue tinted carnation wristlet corsages and small single strands of pearls and white wrist-length gloves with pearl buttons at the wrists, gifts of the bride. They wore ice blue tinted slippers to match their gowns.

The ring bearer, Master Larry William Hart, cousin of the bride, carried the bridal couple's rings down the aisle on a rectangular-shape pillow of white satin edged in chantilly lace. Each corner was decorated with a satin bow and streamers tied in lovers' knots and accented with teardrop pearls.

Attending Mr. Galemore as best man was Haskell Ross of Decatur, Alabama, former college roommate. Groomsmen were Lawrence Galemore and Jerry Galemore of Charleston, cousins of the groom, and Mike Ellis of Charleston, friend of the groom.

Serving as ushers were James Henry Bartholomew, II, of Sikeston, brother of the bride; Gary Galemore of Charleston, brother of the groom; Richard "Dickie" Galemore and Kenneth Quertermous of Charleston, cousins of the groom.

All men of the wedding party were attired in black formal tuxedoes. All the men of the wedding party wore white elegants carnation boutonnieres except the groom. Mr. Galemore wore a white butterfly rose boutonniere.

Mrs. Bartholomew wore for her only daughter's wedding an original creation of powder blue lace. Her dress was fashioned in a sabrina neckline and elbow-length sleeves and accented with a self fabric tailored bow belt. She wore a matching flowered pill box hat of various shades of blue and a corsage of white carnations with powder blue tulle and lace ribbon. Powder blue tinted slippers and bag of peau de soie and white gloves completed her ensemble.

Mrs. Galemore, mother of the groom, was attired in an ensemble of ice-mist green chantilly accented by a wide satin matching bow at the waistline. Flowers of various shades of green composed her pill box hat and she wore three-quarter length beige leather gloves. A corsage of champagne carnations with matching tulle and ribbon and ice mist green tinted slippers and bag of peau de soie completed her attire.

Mrs. Henry Hart, step-grandmother of the bride, and Mrs. Frank Peyton and Mrs. L. E. Galemore, Sr., grandmothers of the groom wore carnation corsages with their attire.

RECEPTION

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the church dining room with the bride and groom, their parents, and the bridesmaids forming the receiving line.

The beautifully appointed bride's table was covered with a white linen cloth overlaid with blue net which was caught at intervals with net, ribbon, and white wedding bells. A large silver punch bowl and tray appointed each end of the table and two seven - branch candlelabra holding glowing tapers flanked the large five column wedding cake topped with white wedding bells which centered the table. Greenery encircled the cake with white gold runners imprinted with "Carol Jane and Ronald, June 27, 1965" down the center of the table. A small open white Bible of pastry enscribed in blue icing "Carol Jane Bartholomew and Ronald Gene Galemore in Holy Matrimony June 27, 1965" was placed immediately in front of the wedding cake. Nuts and decorated mints were served from silver compotes.

The reception was catered by Mrs. Rebecca Sharp of New Madrid. Serving at the reception were Miss La Donna Gartrell of Dexter, college friend of the bride, Mrs. Lou Ella Barringer of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, Mrs. Ronald E. Knight of Charleston, and Miss Peggy Anne Lee of Sikeston, all friends of the bride. Presiding at the guest book was Mrs. Howard Reed of Jefferson City. The wedding book enscribed "Carol Jane and Ronald" was placed on a table covered with white linen cloth and decorated in the same theme as the bride's table. At the opening of the book where the guests registered was a formal wedding portrait of the bride. All those assisting at the reception wore white carnation corsages accented in blue.

Upon leaving the reception the bride and groom threw the traditional bridal bouquet and garter. The bride's bouquet was caught by Miss Linda Johnson and the garter was caught by James Henry Bartholomew, II.

WEDDING TRIP

Mr. and Mrs. Galemore departed that afternoon for a honeymoon in New Orleans, La. For traveling, the new Mrs. Galemore wore a two-piece blue crepe dress with white patent accessories and a corsage of ten white elegants carnations with white satin ribbon and tulle. The bridal couple will be at home to their friends at 311 Edmondson Street in Sikeston after July 11.

Mrs. Galemore is a former student at Murray State College, Murray, Kentucky, and is now employed in the Installment Loan Department of the Bank of Sikeston where she will continue. Mr. Galemore is a senior at Murray State College. He is employed by Buchmueller-Whitworth and Associates during the summer vacation and will return to Murray State this fall where he will graduate in January.

REHEARSAL DINNER

Mr. and Mrs. Joe B. Galemore were host and hostess for a rehearsal dinner given Saturday evening, June 26, at 7:00 p.m. in the Flower Room of the Holiday Inn in Sikeston. The dinner was in honor of their son, Ronald Gene Galemore and his fiancee, Miss Carol Jane Bartholomew.

The bride's table was laid with a white linen cloth and was in a T shape. The centerpiece was a large arrangement of white butterfly rose buds and blue daisies entwined with Queen Ann's lace. Two nine-branch candlelabra holding glowing white tapers with large blue satin bows flanked either side of the centerpiece. The tables had runners of greenery. The guests' places were marked by individual place cards of white satin ring pillows edged with lace and lilies of the valley and miniature rings. Placed along the tables were also individual ash trays inscribed "Carol and Ronald, June 27, 1965."

Miss Bartholomew was attired in a blue whipped cream dress fashioned with long, smocked sleeves closing at the wrists with self-covered buttons. She wore white accessories. Her attire was complemented by a corsage of white carnations accented in blue, a gift of the groom's parents. Mrs. Galemore wore a soft yellow three-piece dress of voile with yellow accessories. The back fell into a coachman with self-trimmed bow at the waistline of the long-sweep train which had lace motifs in the swallowed-tailed train.

She wore a headpiece fashioned in a dainty princess crown of seed pearls and attached to this was a waist length veil of pure silk illusion with lace motifs around the bottom edge. The bride carried a large cascade arrangement of two dozen white butterfly roses with white satin streamers tied in lovers' knots. Attached to her bridal bouquet was a pure linen and lace handkerchief which had been carried by her matron of honor, Mrs. Larry L. Gardner, in her wedding. The bride's only jewelry was a white gold necklace with a diamond pendant, a gift of the groom. White peau de soie slippers completed her bridal attire. The bride carried out "the something old, something new, something borrowed, and something blue" theme in her bridal attire.

Miss Bartholomew chose Mrs. Larry L. Gardner of New Madrid as her matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Sandra Ferguson of Crayne, Kentucky, a former college roommate of the bride, Miss Linda Johnson, and Mrs. Ronald Cullins, cousin of the groom. They were attired identically in dresses fashioned with romance-blue chantilly lace bodices with deep renascence necklines and long tapered sleeves. The floor-length, pencil-slim skirts were of organza over satin. Bias bands of self fabric encircled the empire waistlines and self-tailored bows enhanced the back waistlines. They wore matching headpieces of romance blue. Their circular nosetip veils were secured to princess crowns of seed pearls. They each carried large cascade arrangements of blue-tipped carnations with blue satin streamers tied in lovers' knots. Romance blue tinted slippers completed their attire.

Little Miss Sheila Ann Estes of Portageville, cousin of the bride, served as flower girl. She carried a white basket trimmed with blue satin bows and filled with blue-tipped carnation pedals. Miss Carolyn Galemore, Bertrand, and Miss Claudia Mulcahy, Sikeston, both cousins of the groom, served as candlelighters. Miss Jamie Galemore, Bertrand, cousin of the groom was in charge of the rice bags. She carried a large white basket trimmed with large white bows and tulle, and filled with individual rice bags of blue-tinted rice and blue ribbon. The girls were attired identically in ice blue chantilly lace bodices with jewell necklines and elbow-length sleeves. The floor-length A-line skirts were organza over satin. Bias bands of self fabric encircled the empire waistlines and self-tailored bows enhanced the back waistlines. They wore blue tinted carnation wristlet corsages and small single strands of pearls and white wrist-length gloves with pearl buttons at the wrists, gifts of the bride. They wore ice blue tinted slippers to match their gowns.

The ring bearer, Master Larry William Hart, cousin of the bride, carried the bridal couple's rings down the aisle on a rectangular-shape pillow of white satin edged in chantilly lace. Each corner was decorated with a satin bow and streamers tied in lovers' knots and accented with teardrop pearls.

Attending Mr. Galemore as best man was Haskell Ross of Decatur, Alabama, former college roommate. Groomsmen were Lawrence Galemore and Jerry Galemore of Charleston, cousins of the groom, and Mike Ellis of Charleston, friend of the groom.

Serving as ushers were James Henry Bartholomew, II, of Sikeston, brother of the bride; Gary Galemore of Charleston, brother of the groom; Richard "Dickie" Galemore and Kenneth Quertermous of Charleston, cousins of the groom.

All men of the wedding party were attired in black formal tuxedoes. All the men of the wedding party wore white elegants carnation boutonnieres except the groom. Mr. Galemore wore a white butterfly rose boutonniere.

Mrs. Bartholomew wore for her only daughter's wedding an original creation of powder blue lace. Her dress was fashioned in a sabrina neckline and elbow-length sleeves and accented with a self fabric tailored bow belt. She wore a matching flowered pill box hat of various shades of blue and a corsage of white carnations with powder blue tulle and lace ribbon. Powder blue tinted slippers and bag of peau de soie and white gloves completed her ensemble.

Mrs. Galemore, mother of the groom, was attired in an ensemble of ice-mist green chantilly accented by a wide satin matching bow at the waistline. Flowers of various shades of green composed her pill box hat and she wore three-quarter length beige leather gloves. A corsage of champagne carnations with matching tulle and ribbon and ice mist green tinted slippers and bag of peau de soie completed her attire.

Mrs. Henry Hart, step-grandmother of the bride, and Mrs. Frank Peyton and Mrs. L. E. Galemore, Sr., grandmothers of the groom wore carnation corsages with their attire.

RECEPTION

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the church dining room with the bride and groom, their parents, and the bridesmaids forming the receiving line.

The beautifully appointed bride's table was covered with a white linen cloth overlaid with blue net which was caught at intervals with net, ribbon, and white wedding bells. A large silver punch bowl and tray appointed each end of the table and two seven-branch candlelabra holding glowing tapers flanked the large five column wedding cake topped with white wedding bells which centered the table. Greenery encircled the cake with white gold runners imprinted with "Carol Jane and Ronald, June 27, 1965" down the center of the table. A small open white Bible of pastry enscribed in blue icing "Carol Jane Bartholomew and Ronald Gene Galemore in Holy Matrimony June 27, 1965" was placed immediately in front of the wedding cake. Nuts and decorated mints were served from silver compotes.

The reception was catered by Mrs. Rebecca Sharp of New Madrid. Serving at the reception were Miss La Donna Gartrell of Dexter, college friend of the bride, Mrs. Lou Ella Barringer of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, Mrs. Ronald E. Knight of Charleston, and Miss Peggy Anne Lee of Sikeston, all friends of the bride. Presiding at the guest book was Mrs. Howard Reed of Jefferson City. The wedding book enscribed "Carol Jane and Ronald" was placed on a table covered with white linen cloth and decorated in the same theme as the bride's table. At the opening of the book where the guests registered was a formal wedding portrait of the bride. All those assisting at the reception wore white carnation corsages accented in blue.

Upon leaving the reception the bride and groom threw the traditional bridal bouquet and garter. The bride's bouquet was caught by Miss Linda Johnson and the garter was caught by James Henry Bartholomew, II.

For traveling, the new Mrs. Galemore wore a two-piece blue crepe dress with white patent accessories and a corsage of ten white elegants carnations with white satin ribbon and tulle. Leible Sparkles For Kiwanis Lewis Explodes in Sixth

At Puckett Field last night, Kiwanis bumped off Legion in the first game of the National League doublehitter. Legion was overrun with a score of 6-2.

Lieble was the ace pitcher of the first bout as he held his opponents to 6 hits and 2 runs. Allen, backed up by Puckett, was given the loss allowing 6 runs on 10 hits.

Kiwanis took the lead right at first as they drilled a hit to score a run in the bottom of the second holding Legion scoreless. Kiwanis went on to trip 4 hits in the third to force across 3 runs. In the top of the fourth, Legion acquired their first of 2 runs of the evening. The slugging Kiwanis took 2 runs on 2 hits to add to and total their score to 6. Legion made another effort as they cracked another hit to score again in the last.

Shy and Britt showed off again as each pounded 2 hits -- each having a double for the lossers. Leible not only sparkled in tossing the ball, but also in belting it. The little pitcher smashed 2 singles and one homerun for the powerful Kiwanis team. Milton also had 3 hits 3 -- one being a double.

Leible Sparkles For Kiwanis Lewis Explodes in Sixth

At Puckett Field last night, Kiwanis bumped off Legion in the first game of the National League doublehitter. Legion was overrun with a score of 6-2.

Lieble was the ace pitcher of the first bout as he held his opponents to 6 hits and 2 runs. Allen, backed up by Puckett, was given the loss allowing 6 runs on 10 hits.

Kiwanis took the lead right at first as they drilled a hit to score a run in the bottom of the second holding Legion scoreless. Kiwanis went on to trip 4 hits in the third to force across 3 runs. In the top of the fourth, Legion acquired their first of 2 runs of the evening. The slugging Kiwanis took 2 runs on 2 hits to add to and total their score to 6. Legion made another effort as they cracked another hit to score again in the last.

Shy and Britt showed off again as each pounded 2 hits -- each having a double for the lossers. Leible not only sparkled in tossing the ball, but also in belting it. The little pitcher smashed 2 singles and one homerun for the powerful Kiwanis team. Milton also had 3 hits 3 -- one being a double.

Not All Taxes Are Being Cut

NEW YORK -- If you suspect that despite all the talk about tax cuts your tax bills have been adding up to as much or even more than ever, you may well be right.

Much of this is due to rising state and local taxes. The total tax is estimated at around $50 billion this year. In 1963 these levies averaged out to about $250 per capita. This year the figure is close to $290 per capita.

But the federal government, too, has been taking in more than before it cut the rates. Its receipts from all sources are up $4 billion over a year ago.

The Treasury explains that with two million more persons employed now than before the tax cut early in 1964, and with many others getting higher pay and working longer hours, the total personal income has been rising. So there is more subject to tax, even if the rates have been lowered.

Also corporate profits have been soaring. The corporate income tax rate was lowered in two steps -- from 52 per cent to 48 per cent. But tax collections on the larger earnings netted the Treasury nearly $2 billion more in the fiscal year that ended June 30.

The Treasury also suspects that much of the increase in collections in the past year has been due to their new computers. These machines keep a closer eye on an individual's sources of income, such as interest and dividends. And more of these are being reported now than when tax forms were inspected only by the human eye, and on a sampling basis.

Some taxes you pay the federal government aren't included in the cut on income rates. Social Security levies, for instance, have risen as more persons were employed. And next year the percentage withheld from pay checks will be steeper than ever.

But the biggest percentage rise in tax collections has been at the state and local level.

The Tax Foundation, a New York-based research agency, reports that from fiscal 1955 to 1965 federal tax receipts rose 72 per cent. In the same 10 years state tax receipts jumped 136 per cent, and local governments increased their take by 117 per cent.

Some of this was due to increased prosperity supplying higher incomes and swelling property values on which to levy taxes. Much of it was due to use of new taxes or higher rates on old ones.

If the U. S. Treasury could take in about $4 billion more from all sources in the 1965 fiscal year, the state and local collectors probably did at least as well.

One way or another, many Americans will be paying more taxes this year, even if the federal income rate has been cut.

You can save a lot of breath if you will remember what an old backwoods justice of the peace told an oratorically minded young lawyer. "Fuss," said the judge, "is the poorest substitute they is fer sense."

Act To Close Two Taverns

ROCKAWAY BEACH, Mo. (AP)—Legal steps were taken late Wednesday night to close two of Rockaway Beach's four taverns as a result of last weekend's riot by more than 2,000 college - age July 4th vacationers.

Peter Rea, the Taney County prosecutor, filed for temporary injunctions against Rocco's Gay 90s and the Ol' Still Barefoot, and Magistrate Clifford Crouch issued them. The sheriff's office was ordered to take immediate action.

A hearing in Taney County Circuit Court before Judge Garner Moody was set for 1 p.m. July 12.

The prosecutor had conferred with Rockaway Beach business people who signed a petition urging that he take action against the taverns. They said they feared further rioting over the Labor Day weekend.

The Modern Christian

If Christians possess "new life," why do they differ so little from others who do not claim to be Christians?

The Apostle Paul leaves no doubt that the Christian enters a new existence (I Cor. 1;30, Col. 2;10). The stress in these passages is not on a moral demand, but on the sheer fact of existing in faithful attachment to God.

To His (God's) gift you owe your existence in Christ Jesus" (I Co. 1;30). In Christ, Christians have entered into the possession of the fullness of existence.

We are accustomed to such phrases as "in the army" or "in the high income bracket." Yet, we have difficulty in appreciating the impact of being "in Christ."

Paul's thought reveals a deeper insight than the mere adding on of a new layer of dignity or responsibility. The depth of its meaning is given when Paul says: "If anyone is in Christ, he is a new creature" (2 Cor. 5;17).

The new life is so new and its effects so profound, that it can be compared only to the act of creation; In Christ Jesus Christians have been created" (Eph. 4;24).

The Christian's existence, now in the final stages of God's design, does not entitle him to passivity, but necessarily fires him to action because "the time is short" (I Cor. 7;29).

Some Christians, like the Thessalonians, conclude that there is nothing more to do but to await the second coming of Christ. Paul agrees with this, but equates the srvice of God with awaiting the return of His Son (I Thess. 1;9).

We can observe stagnancy within others and most assuredly within ourselves. There is here a double dimension; what we are, and how we live what we are. The one is a gift of God, and the other is a response to the gift.

The difference that you observe between the Christian or new creature, and the non-Christian lies not in the gift to the new man, but in the response of the new man.

A computer clicking away like mad in the Pentagon has popped up the fact that Col. Steve Canyon is one of the few military men who have had contact with former Queen Bay of Mahnay.

And that explains why Steve is ordered on exchange duty with the Royal Air Force in Hong Kong.

Steve isn't at all displeased at the assignment, although he has most unpleasant recollections of the Queen Bay, who cooly amputated her own infected had after she had shot her husband, the king, and was deposed by her crafty stepdaughter.

One reason Steve finds his new post most pleasurable is a lass named Mew Hasty, an Intelligence Flying Officer in the Women's Royal Air Force.

But what will happen when Steve runs afoul of the ex-Queen, now feared in Hong Kong as MADAME HOOK?

You'll find out in the exciting and romantic new adventure in--

New Pastor At Hayti

HAYTI — R. Harold Clement will move to Hayti, Monday to begin work as minister of the Church of Christ.

Clement is from Ridgely, Tenn., where he has worked with the church of Christ there for three years.

Clement is 32, married and has three daughters. His wife's name is Bernadean; his eldest daughter, Anetta is 7; Sharon is 3; and Denise is 18 months.

Clement started preaching in the Chicago area in 1956. He helped start the Lakeview Church of Christ in Chicago area in 1958. He attended for two years the Harding Graduate School of Bible and religion in Memphis. Mr. and Mrs. Clement are both graduates of Cottage Grove High School of Cottage Grove, Tenn. They were reared in Henry County, Tennessee, near Paris. The congregation is truly looking forward to their moving to Hayti. The Minister's home is being redecorated.

DON CAROL MORROW of Little Rock, Ark., brother of Melvin Morrow, will be commissioned a second lieutenant in graduation exercises at Arkansas Military Academy at Camp Robinson in Arkansas tomorrow.

A brand-new, red-hot flight officer en route overseas was taking off from Ascension in an A-20. The technique of this particular "Smoldering Boulder" was to guess when he'd reached required flying speed and retract his landing gear--which should make the airplane fly.

Possibly the undulations of the runway caused a slight miscalculation; on this takeoff, the airplane settled slightly as the pilot brought the gear up and the prop tips struck the runway. Much to the surprise of the navigator, the course was held and the climb-out was continued. The navigator, of course, figured that the pilot would make a quick swing around the flight pattern and land the ship. To check the intentions of the pilot, the navigator called him on the interphone. "Mr. Blotz, do you know we hit the runway with our props on take-off?" he inquired.

"Roger," replied Mr. Blotz.

"Don't you think we should return, land and inspect the damage?" asked the navigator.

"To hell with them!" said Mr. Blotz. "Let 'em fix their own runway."

--Lt. Col. G. T. Iovine

We were on board ship en route to Germany. When the fire bell sounded, there was a mad scramble. It was every man for himself. Order wasn't restored until a voice boomed: "Don't push, don't push! There's plenty of water for everybody!" — Arthur D. Frederick, Jr.

New Pastor At Hayti

HAYTI — R. Harold Clement will move to Hayti, Monday to begin work as minister of the Church of Christ.

Clement is from Ridgely, Tenn., where he has worked with the church of Christ there for three years.

Clement is 32, married and has three daughters. His wife's name is Bernadean; his eldest daughter, Anetta is 7; Sharon is 3; and Denise is 18 months.

Clement started preaching in the Chicago area in 1956. He helped start the Lakeview Church of Christ in Chicago area in 1958. He attended for two years the Harding Graduate School of Bible and religion in Memphis. Mr. and Mrs. Clement are both graduates of Cottage Grove High School of Cottage Grove, Tenn. They were reared in Henry County, Tennessee, near Paris. The congregation is truly looking forward to their moving to Hayti. The Minister's home is being redecorated.

DON CAROL MORROW of Little Rock, Ark., brother of Melvin Morrow, will be commissioned a second lieutenant in graduation exercises at Arkansas Military Academy at Camp Robinson in Arkansas tomorrow.

A brand-new, red-hot flight officer en route overseas was taking off from Ascension in an A-20. The technique of this particular "Smoldering Boulder" was to guess when he'd reached required flying speed and retract his landing gear--which should make the airplane fly.

Possibly the undulations of the runway caused a slight miscalculation; on this takeoff, the airplane settled slightly as the pilot brought the gear up and the prop tips struck the runway. Much to the surprise of the navigator, the course was held and the climb-out was continued. The navigator, of course, figured that the pilot would make a quick swing around the flight pattern and land the ship. To check the intentions of the pilot, the navigator called him on the interphone. "Mr. Blotz, do you know we hit the runway with our props on take-off?" he inquired.

"Roger," replied Mr. Blotz. "Don't you think we should return, land and inspect the damage?" asked the navigator.

"To hell with them!" said Mr. Blotz. "Let 'em fix their own runway."

--Lt. Col. G. T. Iovine

We were on board ship en route to Germany. When the fire bell sounded, there was a mad scramble. It was every man for himself. Order wasn't restored until a voice boomed: "Don't push, don't push! There's plenty of water for everybody!" — Arthur D. Frederick, Jr.

PRAYER
For Today From The Upper Room

For freedom did Christ set us Free: stand fast therefore, and be not entangled again in a yoke of bondage. (Galatians 5:1, ASV)

PRAYER: O Lord God, I thank Thee that Jesus came and shared my nature, suffering, and dying for me. Praise be to Thee that I learn through Him that my freedom is not found in pampering my own will but in obeying Thine. Grant that I may receive Christ and in Him know freedom which is freedom indeed. For these things I ask and thank Thee in the name of Jesus, who taught His disciples to pray, "Our Father who art in heaven. . . . . .Amen."

Beet Tests Continue In Dunklin

KENNETT -- Dunklin County agriculturists are continuing to experiment with sugar beet crops in hopes of soon getting Government acreage allocations.

Marvin C. Dobbs, Dunklin county agent, said two five-acre plots are testing for best planting and harvesting times and seeking to develop a variety suitable to this area of the country. The Delta Research Center at Portageville is testing soil fertility.

Sugar beet testing plots were set up in Southeast Missouri, Northwest Tennessee and Northeast Arkansas in 1961 under supervision of the Great Western Sugar Co. of Denver.

Arkansas and Missouri test plots showed sugar beets can be grown in the area and that sugar content of the beets was adequate.

"But it is still in an experimental stage," Mr. Dobbs said.

The research center in Portageville is conduction the testing this year.

"We think sugar beets would be profitable in this area if we can get Government acreage and if any sugar beet companies decide to expand. It might be years," Dobbs said.

Arkansas agriculturists discontinued testing at the Northeast Branch Experiment Station in Keiser after the harvest last fall.

Maxie Taylor, director of the station, said testing was conducted in clay soil at Keiser and in sandy soil at Manila.

"But we found we would have trouble getting a market," Taylor said. "There are enough sugar beets being grown now to meet demand."

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: I am 21 years old. My father-in-law is 40. Three weeks ago my father-in-law had a small benign tumor removed. Before the operation a nurse came into his room and shaved his chest.

Last night we went to see him and he said he has never felt better in his life. My father-in-law remarked that he is certain a part of his feeling of well-being is because he is now rid of all that strength-sapping hair on his chest. He says he is going to continue to shave his chest every week or so and urged me to do the same.

My wife was present during this conversation but she remained silent. On the way home she said, "I always thought my father was a little nutty but now I'm sure. If you dare shave your chest I'll brain you."

Do you know anything about this practice? I'd like an opinion from an outsider. — HARRIED HUSBAND

Dear Husband: One of the fascinating aspects of writing this column is that the search for answers get me involved in the goll-darnedest things. My medical consultants tell me the only males they have encountered who shave their chests are female impersonators.

Dear Ann Landers: In a recent column you told a parent that his sassy teenager really WANTED to be hauled up short and disciplined. You said kids often push as far as they can — testing, hoping somebody will say, "Enough. No more of this." Well, I'm a teen-ager who will back you up. You never wrote truer words.

I am a boy almost 19 and I understand things a lot better than I used to. I know from experience there were times when I talked terrible to my folks and did things I shouldn't have done because I wanted them to move in on me. Instead, they let me do anything. When I got into trouble they made excuses for me and got me off.

A high school teacher saved me from becoming a delinquent and a bum. She told me I had too good a brain and too much ability to waste it on nonsense and that I'd better discipline myself because it was apparent that nobody at home was going to do it. That teacher changed my life. She did the job my folks failed to do. I will never forget her. — GRATEFUL GEORGE

Dear George: Everything begins with an idea. Your letter may give other teen-agers an idea that could change their lives. Thanks for writing.

Dear Ann Landers: Three years ago our son got a young girl in trouble. Her parents kicked her out of the house and we took her in. Our son did not marry her because he saw no chance of a good life with the girl. Our religion permits only one marriage and he didn't want to waste it.

After the baby was born the girl asked us if we would adopt the child and raise it. She wanted to get as far away from our town as possible. We agreed.

In September my husband is being transferred to a large city 3,000 miles from here. I feel it would be best to let our new friends believe the child is ours and to say nothing about the background. My husband says we should tell the whole truth because sooner or later someone who knows us is sure to pop up and make us look like fools and liars.

What is your opinion? — STRICTLY OUR OWN BUSINESS

Dear Strictly: Of course this is your business, but unfortunately, it's the kind of business some people like best. Tell your new friends the youngster is your grandchild whom you adopted as the result of "an unhappy situation." No more need be said.

If excessive drinking is wrecking your health or destroying someone you love, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Help for the Alcoholic," enclosing with your request 20 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

. . . about to take on all the responsibilities of womanhood.

In the past few years, the number of marriages between the ages of 15 and 19 has increased overwhelmingly. Too often juvenile marriage statistics are immediately followed, however, by an increase in divorces, too.

You may find yourselves in the position of having a son or daughter who marries very young. The best thing you can do is to try to make the marriage a success. Teach your youngsters, through strong religious Faith, that marriage is a permanent union based on two people united and working together. Faith is a powerful guide for your children and comforter through growing up or growing older. This week go with your children to the Church or Synagogue of your choice.

PRAYER
For Today From The Upper Room

For freedom did Christ set us Free: stand fast therefore, and be not entangled again in a yoke of bondage. (Galatians 5:1, ASV)

PRAYER: O Lord God, I thank Thee that Jesus came and shared my nature, suffering, and dying for me. Praise be to Thee that I learn through Him that my freedom is not found in pampering my own will but in obeying Thine. Grant that I may receive Christ and in Him know freedom which is freedom indeed. For these things I ask and thank Thee in the name of Jesus, who taught His disciples to pray, "Our Father who art in heaven. . . . . .Amen."

Beet Tests Continue In Dunklin

KENNETT -- Dunklin County agriculturists are continuing to experiment with sugar beet crops in hopes of soon getting Government acreage allocations.

Marvin C. Dobbs, Dunklin county agent, said two five-acre plots are testing for best planting and harvesting times and seeking to develop a variety suitable to this area of the country. The Delta Research Center at Portageville is testing soil fertility.

Sugar beet testing plots were set up in Southeast Missouri, Northwest Tennessee and Northeast Arkansas in 1961 under supervision of the Great Western Sugar Co. of Denver.

Arkansas and Missouri test plots showed sugar beets can be grown in the area and that sugar content of the beets was adequate.

"But it is still in an experimental stage," Mr. Dobbs said.

The research center in Portageville is conduction the testing this year.

"We think sugar beets would be profitable in this area if we can get Government acreage and if any sugar beet companies decide to expand. It might be years," Dobbs said.

Arkansas agriculturists discontinued testing at the Northeast Branch Experiment Station in Keiser after the harvest last fall.

Maxie Taylor, director of the station, said testing was conducted in clay soil at Keiser and in sandy soil at Manila.

"But we found we would have trouble getting a market," Taylor said. "There are enough sugar beets being grown now to meet demand."

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: I am 21 years old. My father-in-law is 40. Three weeks ago my father-in-law had a small benign tumor removed. Before the operation a nurse came into his room and shaved his chest.

Last night we went to see him and he said he has never felt better in his life. My father-in-law remarked that he is certain a part of his feeling of well-being is because he is now rid of all that strength-sapping hair on his chest. He says he is going to continue to shave his chest every week or so and urged me to do the same.

My wife was present during this conversation but she remained silent. On the way home she said, "I always thought my father was a little nutty but now I'm sure. If you dare shave your chest I'll brain you."

Do you know anything about this practice? I'd like an opinion from an outsider. — HARRIED HUSBAND

Dear Husband: One of the fascinating aspects of writing this column is that the search for answers get me involved in the goll-darnedest things. My medical consultants tell me the only males they have encountered who shave their chests are female impersonators.

Dear Ann Landers: In a recent column you told a parent that his sassy teenager really WANTED to be hauled up short and disciplined. You said kids often push as far as they can — testing, hoping somebody will say, "Enough. No more of this." Well, I'm a teen-ager who will back you up. You never wrote truer words.

I am a boy almost 19 and I understand things a lot better than I used to. I know from experience there were times when I talked terrible to my folks and did things I shouldn't have done because I wanted them to move in on me. Instead, they let me do anything. When I got into trouble they made excuses for me and got me off.

A high school teacher saved me from becoming a delinquent and a bum. She told me I had too good a brain and too much ability to waste it on nonsense and that I'd better discipline myself because it was apparent that nobody at home was going to do it. That teacher changed my life. She did the job my folks failed to do. I will never forget her. — GRATEFUL GEORGE

Dear George: Everything begins with an idea. Your letter may give other teen-agers an idea that could change their lives. Thanks for writing.

Dear Ann Landers: Three years ago our son got a young girl in trouble. Her parents kicked her out of the house and we took her in. Our son did not marry her because he saw no chance of a good life with the girl. Our religion permits only one marriage and he didn't want to waste it.

After the baby was born the girl asked us if we would adopt the child and raise it. She wanted to get as far away from our town as possible. We agreed.

In September my husband is being transferred to a large city 3,000 miles from here. I feel it would be best to let our new friends believe the child is ours and to say nothing about the background. My husband says we should tell the whole truth because sooner or later someone who knows us is sure to pop up and make us look like fools and liars.

What is your opinion? — STRICTLY OUR OWN BUSINESS

Dear Strictly: Of course this is your business, but unfortunately, it's the kind of business some people like best. Tell your new friends the youngster is your grandchild whom you adopted as the result of "an unhappy situation." No more need be said.

If excessive drinking is wrecking your health or destroying someone you love, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Help for the Alcoholic," enclosing with your request 20 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

"But she's just a baby.."
. . . about to take on all the responsibilities of womanhood.

In the past few years, the number of marriages between the ages of 15 and 19 has increased overwhelmingly. Too often juvenile marriage statistics are immediately followed, however, by an increase in divorces, too.

You may find yourselves in the position of having a son or daughter who marries very young. The best thing you can do is to try to make the marriage a success. Teach your youngsters, through strong religious Faith, that marriage is a permanent union based on two people united and working together. Faith is a powerful guide for your children and comforter through growing up or growing older. This week go with your children to the Church or Synagogue of your choice.

Today In U. S. History

Today is Friday, July 9, the 190th day of 1965. There are 175 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1755, Gen. Edward Braddock's British regulars marched, as in dress parade, against the French-held Ft. Duquesne. The British ran into a hail of musketry fire from an enemy they could not even see in the thick forest. The Redcoats retreated, leaving the area of what is now Pittsburgh to the French. Braddock was killed; his only surviving aide was young George Washington.

On this date:

In 1778, the ratification of the Articles of Confederation began at Philadelphia.

In 1850, the nation's 12th president, Zachary Taylor, died after 16 months in office.

In 1916, the first merchant submarine to cross the Atlantic and the first in time of war, the German "Deutschland," arrived in Chesapeake Bay from Germany.

In 1927, one of the greats of the American theater, John Drew, died after being stricken on stage in San Francisco.

In 1944, Japanese resistance ended on Saipan in the Marianas Islands after a battle of nearly a month.

Ten years ago -- nine scientists--seven of them Nobel Prize winners -- published an appeal to end the use of thermonuclear bombs and to abolish war.

Five years ago-- President Dwight D. Eisenhower, following a threat by Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev to retaliate with rockets if the United States intervened in Cuba, warned he never would permit the establishment of a Communist-dominated government in the Western Hemisphere.

One year ago -- A United Air Lines Viscount plane crashed near Newport, Tenn., killing all 39 aboard.

Story Hour at Benton Tuesday

BENTON — It will be story hour time at the Benton library Tuesday, 10:45 a.m., 11:30 a.m., and again on July 20th and July 27th.

The story will be told by a staff member of the Riverside regional library. All youngsters of the community — pre-school on through grade school — are wanted.

Following the story hour films will be shown. The film for Tuesday is "Mother Cat and Her Baby Skunks."

Cartoons will be shown.

SLANDER

Slander casts a shadow
Like that of bat wings
O'er the lives of those it hovers o'er
Destroying those who come
Within its hideous sway
Destroying in a short swift flight
That which its objects
May have spent all their lives
To build right.

Today In U. S. History

Today is Friday, July 9, the 190th day of 1965. There are 175 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1755, Gen. Edward Braddock's British regulars marched, as in dress parade, against the French-held Ft. Duquesne. The British ran into a hail of musketry fire from an enemy they could not even see in the thick forest. The Redcoats retreated, leaving the area of what is now Pittsburgh to the French. Braddock was killed; his only surviving aide was young George Washington.

On this date:

In 1778, the ratification of the Articles of Confederation began at Philadelphia.

In 1850, the nation's 12th president, Zachary Taylor, died after 16 months in office.

In 1916, the first merchant submarine to cross the Atlantic and the first in time of war, the German "Deutschland," arrived in Chesapeake Bay from Germany.

In 1927, one of the greats of the American theater, John Drew, died after being stricken on stage in San Francisco.

In 1944, Japanese resistance ended on Saipan in the Marianas Islands after a battle of nearly a month.

Ten years ago -- nine scientists--seven of them Nobel Prize winners -- published an appeal to end the use of thermonuclear bombs and to abolish war.

Five years ago-- President Dwight D. Eisenhower, following a threat by Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev to retaliate with rockets if the United States intervened in Cuba, warned he never would permit the establishment of a Communist-dominated government in the Western Hemisphere.

One year ago -- A United Air Lines Viscount plane crashed near Newport, Tenn., killing all 39 aboard.

SLANDER

Slander casts a shadow
Like that of bat wings
O'er the lives of those it hovers o'er
Destroying those who come
Within its hideous sway
Destroying in a short swift flight
That which its objects
May have spent all their lives
To build right.

Grant Hearing For Montgomery

A hearing requested by attorneys for Joel A. Montgomery, wealthy banker and landowner, was granted today by Gov. Warren E. Hearnes after the chief executive received formal extradition papers from the governor of Tennessee.

A three-member panel, to be appointed by Governor Hearnes, will hear attorneys for Montgomery and then make recommendations to the governor.

The papers were received in Jefferson City today, Governor Hearnes told the Standard, and although only two members of the panel have been appointed, no date has been set for the hearng. The governor said he has appointed Robert Howard, Columbia, dean emeritus of the University of Missouri Law School, and Orville Richardson, St. Loui, former president of the Missouri Bar Association, to the panel. The third member of the panel will be selected from the Kansas City area, Hearnes indicated.

Tennessee Gov. Frank Clement requested that Montgomery be extradited to face involuntary manslaughter charges stemming from a traffic accident in Memphis nearly six years ago.

The governor said he acted at the request of Tennessee's Shelby County Atty. Gen. Phil M. Canale.

Montgomery was a passenger in his own car, driven by Mrs. Betty Lou Sells, when Miss Glenda Wiles was killed in a collision of the Wiles vehicle and Montgomery's car in Memphis, Oct. 14, 1957.

Mrs. Sells was indicted on second - degree murder charges, convicted and given a three - year sentence. The Tennessee Supreme Court reversed the case and it has not been re-tried.

The dead woman's family, according to Memphis attorney James Smith, does not wish to press the matter any further.

An indictment against Montgomery for involuntary manslaughter was returned by a grand jury Jan. 26, 1962.

Former Tennessee Gov. Buford Ellington requested extradition of Montgomery in 1962, but Missouri Gov. John Dalton declined and the matter was dropped.

A complaint for state warrant was filed in the Jury term of Scott county circuit court by Prosecuting Attorney Fielding Potashnick, at the request of Tennessee Shelby County Attorney General Canale. The warrant's purpose is to establish as legal fact that Montgomery is in Scott county, according to Potashnick.

He will attend church services Sunday morning at the Baptist Church in Kennett.

Paving Plan Given Approval

NEW MADRID — In a session of the board of aldermen Tuesday, little but routine business was attended to, according to Mrs. Pauline K. Allen, city clerk.

The council approved $722.00 in a cooperative plan with Harry Leuer for paving and gutter of about 65 feet on the northeast corner of Powell and Virginia streets where Mr. Leuer is constructing an office building, with Ralph Boyer to do the work.

Mayor Robert Riley appointed City Engineer Jack Long to make and survey a proposed plan for improvements to the city's streets, curbs and sidewalks in preparation for requesting federal assistance in making the approved improvements.

Minutes of the June meeting were approved, reports of all officials were read and approved and all current bills of the city were ordered paid.

Rotary Club Will Install

NEW MADRID — The Rotary Club will install new officers at a special installation and Rotary Ann night dinner at Rosie's Colonial tavern at 6:15 p.m., Monday, according to Harold Sloas, president.

Dr. Frank Sisson of Sikeston, past district governor of Rotary, will serve as installing officer.

New officers who will take over their duties are Carl Sanders as president, James F. Helms as vice-president, Harry Leuer as secretary, and Shelton Rhodes as treasurer.

What really worries me is the case of poor-little-rich-girl Gamble Benedict and her Andre. I mean, how do an heiress and a chauffeur split their community property? She's got this 20-million-dollar trust fund--and he's got his driver's license.

Pot Hole To Rescue

CLIFFWOOD BEACH, N.J. (AP) — For months, residents in this Monmouth County community have complained about bumps and pot holes in their roads.

A hole in the road played the role of hero Thursday.

Fifteen - month - old James Dresser was playing with a spatula in the kitchen of the family home. He stuffed the utensil's handle in his mouth and a metal hook at the end of it caught in the roof of his mouth.

His mother, Mrs. Edward Dresser, was unable to remove the hook. She called police who dispatched an ambulance.

Minutes later, as the youngster was being rushed to a hospital the ambulance hit a pot hole. The jolt shook the hook out of Jimmie's mouth.

The tot was treated for a cut and returned home.

Jerry Lewis Not on Dean's Guest List

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Dean Martin will do 31 television shows this season with 142 guests — but not Jerry Lewis. Not even for a million dollars.

Martin says that both TV and movie produces have bid the big mony for the reunion of the famed comedy team, which split up with bitter words in 1956.

"I like Jerry," says Dean. "I even kiss him when we run into each other, but I don't like the things he said about me."

The feeling is mutual on Jerry's part.

When the two split, the team was one of the funniest and most successful in show business history. It was a $4 million a year corporation.

Now, nine years later, ech does considerably better than that on his own.

People often wonder why the two broke up.

Dean sums it up: "Jerry's work is his life. My life is golf."

To Dean, work is a hobby. He tapes his TV series in two hours after playing 18 holes of golf.

"These guys who take a week to do a half-hour TV show gotta be crazy," says Dean. Dean's first show took four hours but he fixed that.

"I cut out the dress rehearsal."

Dean's got other things to do.

"I make three movies a year, do 15 weeks at the Sands Hotel in Las Vegas, cut a dozen or so albums and make 25 single records a year. And they say Dean Martin doesn't work."

That's because Dean does most of his preparation on the golf course. He plays with a script.

"I hit a four wood, take the paper out of my pocket, look at it and then memorize my lines while I'm walking to the next hole."

Dean, always looking for shortcuts, believes people in the Los Angeles area waste too much time driving in heavy traffic.

"The other night Jeannie and I wanted to go to the Hollywood Bowl.

"I put her on the back of my motorcycle and we made it there in 15 minutes, just weaving in and out of traffic.

"The traffic was heavy, too. Jeannie said 'I know it's heavy because so many cars are rubbing my knuckles.'

"We parked the cycle back of the hot dog stand and got home in 15 minutes. It's crazy to spend two hours driving a car."

Dino recently made his first hole in one. He had promised his foursome that he would buy them dinner.

"They want dinner — in Japan. It seems they're crazy about the rice over there."

Easy and Tight Money Fans Collide

NEW YORK — One of the by-products of the recent hullabaloo in the stock market is still with us: signs of an increasing conflict between the easy and tight money advocates.

Should the United States keep prosperity rolling by making credit abundant at low interest rates? Or should it heed past examples of overconfidence and nip a possible speculative boom to stave off a bust?

One of the reasons apparently behind the selling wave on Wall Street was fear that the Federal Reserve Board would further tighten up on credit and interest rates. And all the talk brought out the difference in opinion between Johnson administration leaders who want easy money and the Federal Reserve Board which traditionally is more cautious.

The Federal Reserve Board has tightened the money supply a little of late. But credit is still easy — as witness the steep rise in personal and business debts.

The debate is the perrenial one: Are people getting in over their depths? Would a marked slackening in the business pace and in job opportunities, and hence in personal incomes, topple many family budgets and bring on general distress?

The administration and the board seem agreed on one thing —at the moment the economy is strong and the credit burden thus doesn't seem dangerous.

The conflict, as Wall Street sees it, is over the chancey future: Will the economy continue to expand? And at what pace?

Steady and moderate gains would seem to offer only minor problems and many wished for benefits. But a big expansion, if based on still easier credit and still greater accumulation of personal and business debts, might lead to an overheating of the economy with an inevitable downturn ahead. And then, say the conservatives, look out for trouble among those who have piled their debts too high.

Defenders of the spread of the habit of fashioning family budgets to the ratio of monthly payments to expectable income point to the fact that personal saving have risen along with personal debts.

But the conservatives warn against generalizations. They say that many who have increased their savings may have little or no debt. And many who have taken on more installment debts may have little if any savings.

It's the latter who would be hurt if something happened to jobs and incomes.

The easy money school argues that the best way to assure more people of having jobs and good incomes is to make credit easy enough for business to borrow to expand its activitie — and for consumers to borrow to buy the goods that increased industrial activity will offer.

And that is one of the things that stock traders were wondering about: Will business go on expanding? Will employment continue to increase? Will a conflict between easy credit and tight money advocates develop and add still another uncertainty to the economic outlook?

Many are betting on the administraton to win and credit to stay fairly plentiful and cheap. But some look for the Federal Reserve Board to get more worried about the size of consumer and business debts and what might happen if the economic expansion plans didn't pan out as expected.

An overage bon vivant was advised by his doctor to slacken those extra- curricular activities and give up women.

"But, doc," he protested, "if I give up women, I might as well give up my life."

"I'm sorry," said the doctor, "but you're literally tearing yourself up piece by piece."

To sin by silence when they should protest makes cowards out of men.

The debate is the perrenial one: Are people getting in over their depths? Would a marked slackening in the business pace and in job opportunities, and hence in personal incomes, topple many family budgets and bring on general distress?

The administration and the board seem agreed on one thing —at the moment the economy is strong and the credit burden thus doesn't seem dangerous.

The conflict, as Wall Street sees it, is over the chancey future: Will the economy continue to expand? And at what pace?

Steady and moderate gains would seem to offer only minor problems and many wished for benefits. But a big expansion, if based on still easier credit and still greater accumulation of personal and business debts, might lead to an overheating of the economy with an inevitable downturn ahead. And then, say the conservatives, look out for trouble among those who have piled their debts too high.

Defenders of the spread of the habit of fashioning family budgets to the ratio of monthly payments to expectable income point to the fact that personal saving have risen along with personal debts.

But the conservatives warn against generalizations. They say that many who have increased their savings may have little or no debt. And many who have taken on more installment debts may have little if any savings.

It's the latter who would be hurt if something happened to jobs and incomes.

The easy money school argues that the best way to assure more people of having jobs and good incomes is to make credit easy enough for business to borrow to expand its activitie — and for consumers to borrow to buy the goods that increased industrial activity will offer.

And that is one of the things that stock traders were wondering about: Will business go on expanding? Will employment continue to increase? Will a conflict between easy credit and tight money advocates develop and add still another uncertainty to the economic outlook?

Many are betting on the administraton to win and credit to stay fairly plentiful and cheap. But some look for the Federal Reserve Board to get more worried about the size of consumer and business debts and what might happen if the economic expansion plans didn't pan out as expected.

An overage bon vivant was advised by his doctor to slacken those extra- curricular activities and give up women.

"But, doc," he protested, "if I give up women, I might as well give up my life."

"I'm sorry," said the doctor, "but you're literally tearing yourself up piece by piece."

To sin by silence when they should protest makes cowards out of men.

Paving Plan Given Approval

NEW MADRID — In a session of the board of aldermen Tuesday, little but routine business was attended to, according to Mrs. Pauline K. Allen, city clerk.

The council approved $722.00 in a cooperative plan with Harry Leuer for paving and gutter of about 65 feet on the northeast corner of Powell and Virginia streets where Mr. Leuer is constructing an office building, with Ralph Boyer to do the work.

Mayor Robert Riley appointed City Engineer Jack Long to make and survey a proposed plan for improvements to the city's streets, curbs and sidewalks in preparation for requesting federal assistance in making the approved improvements.

Minutes of the June meeting were approved, reports of all officials were read and approved and all current bills of the city were ordered paid.

Rotary Club Will Install

NEW MADRID — The Rotary Club will install new officers at a special installation and Rotary Ann night dinner at Rosie's Colonial tavern at 6:15 p.m., Monday, according to Harold Sloas, president.

Dr. Frank Sisson of Sikeston, past district governor of Rotary, will serve as installing officer.

New officers who will take over their duties are Carl Sanders as president, James F. Helms as vice-president, Harry Leuer as secretary, and Shelton Rhodes as treasurer.

What really worries me is the case of poor-little-rich-girl Gamble Benedict and her Andre. I mean, how do an heiress and a chauffeur split their community property? She's got this 20-million-dollar trust fund--and he's got his driver's license.
